Proposed Museum of Safety and Sanitation

The Growing Movement for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents

THE MOST conservative estimate of the loss, in cash, to the wealth of the United States through preventable accidents in the various industries is $125,000,000 a year.

There is in active, quite active, existence in New York a new museum—the Museum of Safety and Sanitation—which is doing pioneer work in demonstrating that this yearly $125,000,000 can be saved at a moderate cost of insurance expenditure for prevention.

All Europe is doing that very thing now. The question for the United States, at last forced upon every employer, is suddenly looming up to such proportions that it casts its shadow over every field of labor, from the turning of a grindstone to the moving of every freight train, and that question is:

Is it worth while?

Is it worth while for the employers of American labor to adopt the safeguards which shall preserve to the nation the lives and limbs of workmen whose productiveness is very conservatively appraised at $125,000,000 a year, and even valued as high as $250,000,000?

It is the most shameful, the most damning question that was ever put before a people since employers read in their Bibles the tales of the merciless oppressions of Pharaoh, and ground their teeth in righteous anger—over his wasteful manufacturing methods.

EVERY dictate of humanity, if humanity had anything to do with industry, would make the question no question at all, but an instant declaration—a declaration that no employer, on his soul and conscience, could dare eat, sleep or live while his workpeople were in danger of being mangled or poisoned, of being maimed or slain, of being suddenly and terribly wrenched from their careers of happy, honorable toil and needlessly condemned to crippling, heartbreaking, courage-destroying helplessness and hopelessness until the grave should vouchsafe to them the mercy denied them by their selfish, pitiless fellow-man.

But, up to date, the dictates of humanity have been conspicuous only by their splendid isolation. The dictates of dollars and cents have been supreme, as dollars and cents are understood in the economy of industrial plants; and they are still supreme in nearly all calculations that are offered apropos of affording protection to the employee's life and limb.

It remains, therefore, to forget entirely the appalled horror of the strong, dexterous workmen as, every year, they are seized unawares and drawn into the macerations of whirling cogs, the electrocution of live, unguarded wires, the ponderous crush of freight cars in the hourly collisions of handling that claim them as their only victims; to heed not at all the anguish-paled faces of the widows and the hunger-paled faces of the children whose provider is slain or stricken to uselessness.

The only thing to be considered is the bloodless, icy, inhuman main fact: Is it worth while to save what those human victims represent—the yearly loss of $250,000,000 or, rather—oh, let us by all means be conservative—$125,000,000 as a minimum.

Observes, in this connection, Dr. William H. Tolman, director of the Museum of Safety and Sanitation:

"Suppose the American public should read these headlines in their morning papers:

TERRIBLE CALAMITY!
BALTIMORE LITERALLY WIPED OUT!
EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD KILLED OR MAIMED.

"Would they not be aghast at the cataclysm?" he inquires. "Yet an industrial massacre to that extent took place in 1908, and raised no outcry, perhaps because the killings and the maimings were spread over twelve months, through the entire country.

"From all causes, in 1908, the industrial accidents totaled 500,000 persons. And the sad fact is that the expert engineers maintain that 50 per cent. of those casualties were preventable.

"Reckoned in dollars, it would mean that $250,000,000 are lost to our country. It is the sum lost through the failure to conserve the health and strength of American wage-earners."

A more sensational illustration might apply to a nation that took its youth and by dint of the utmost, scrupulous care, educated 500,000 of them until they became expert in their allotted tasks—selected them from all others for their peculiar fitness for those vital, indispensable labors; gave its best intelligence and its hoarded wealth to their instruction; made of them such citizens as are the very verterbrae of a mighty people—and then stood them all in the midst of poisonous waters, deadly gases and demonic machinery designed to tear to pieces those who failed to droop and die.

The only fault to be found with this second illustration is that it is indisputably and minutely true. The comparatively new museum came into existence to prove it.

A few weeks ago a railroad brakeman in Pennsylvania, having suffered one of the commonest of "accidents," in the course of his employment, had the temerity to prove in court that his injuries were due to contributory negligence on the part of the railroad that employed him.

The lawyers for the corporation listened to the plain proof of the corporation's responsibility with the admirable equanimity which characterizes lawyers when they have a complete defense.

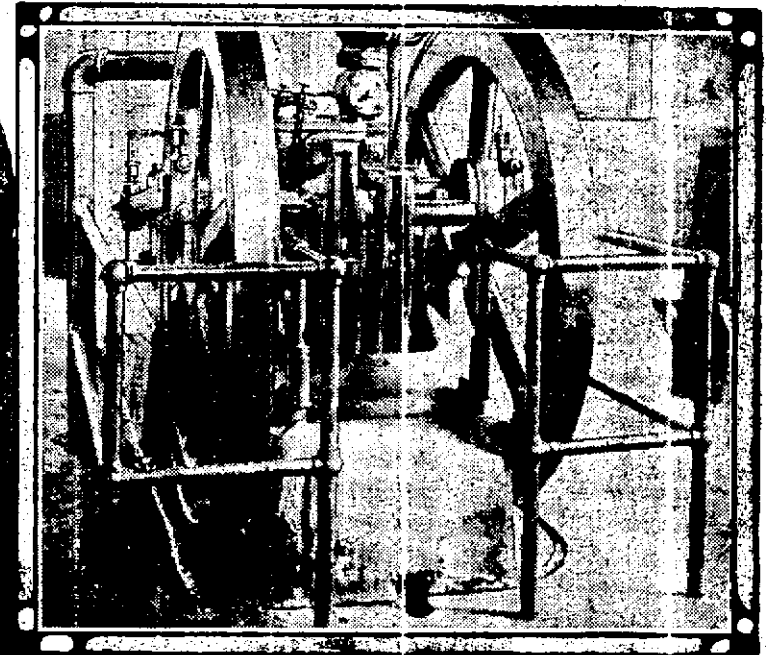

AUTOMATIC LEGAL MACHINERY

When their turn came they offered to the judge and jury, with smiling calm, the regular "waiver" of right to claim any damage against the road on the part of any employee on any ground whatever.

It was a perfectly automatic bit of legal machinery, by which the employer, born without bowels of compassion, put his workmen, born with bowels that can be crushed, into mortal danger every minute of the day and stood safe against any redress whenever the workman happened to be murdered by his man-slaughtering machinery.

A jury of ordinary human men, who were not assessing damages against their own pockets and held before their plain, human eyes the victim of the chicanery that had planned to make murder economical, took the obvious course and awarded him damages. He will get them—when the Supreme Court thinks he is entitled to them.

This case is quoted not because it is unusual, but because it is so typical of current American methods of industrial murder and murderous assault, by means of machinery as unguarded as it is deadly, that the brakeman stands limned in the light of sudden, unusual publicity as the incarnation of the other 499,999 hale, strong, trained workmen who are inevitably fated to follow down to suffering and death this year the 500,000 whom their more ignorant employers tortured and slaughtered last year.

The danger, the one great danger, in considering the subject of the safeguard of working men is the tendency to argue with employers as if they had relics of their immortal souls rattling around in them.

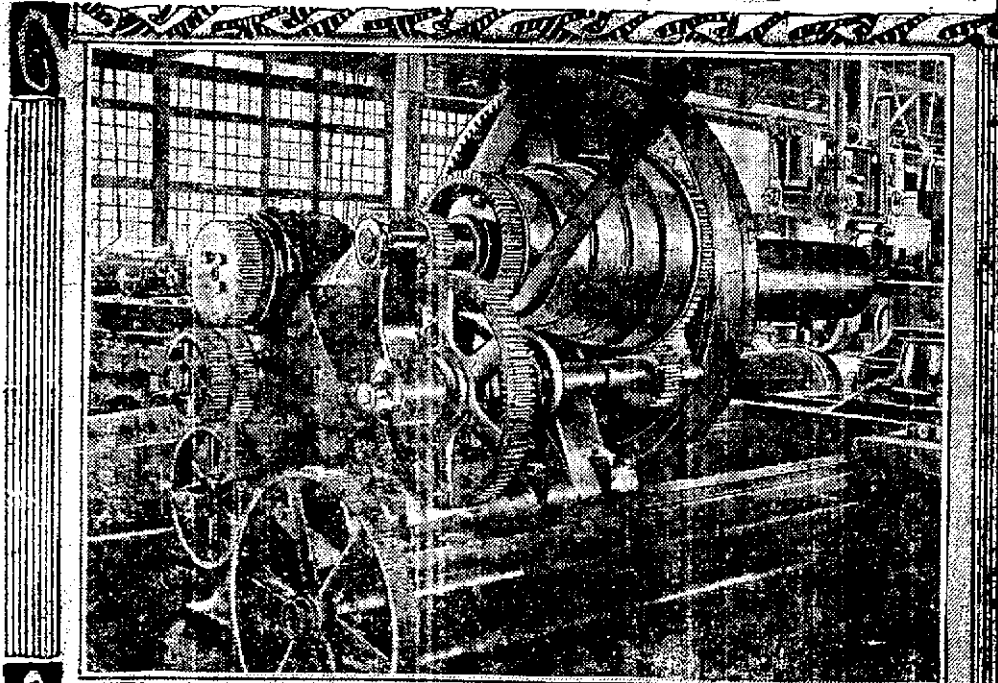

ALL FOR THE POCKETS

In Europe, as in America, all experience has proven that employers in the mass consist exclusively of pockets, precisely as workmen in the mass—rom the day when Charles Reade brought against the rich and the poor of Great Britain the fearful indictment, "Put Yourself in His Place"—consist exclusively of stomachs.

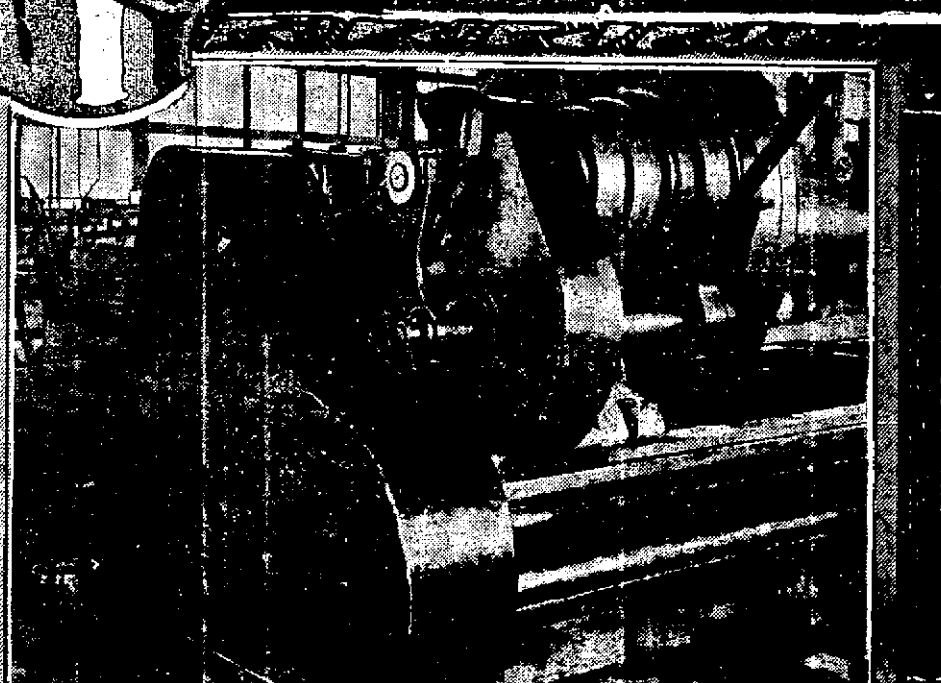

Like the highly expert brakeman labor in the mass will take any chance of death and injury to earn the wages that mean food, as, like the railroad that crumpled him up with its freight cars, capital in the mass will create any danger to life and limb that will maintain the economies which mean profits.

Did it pay to smash up that brakeman; did it pay to maim and kill 500,000 other workpeople last year; will it pay to maim and kill 499,999 more this year?

All Europe is now agreed that it doesn't pay, and the various countries are maintaining ten industrial safety museums to prove it. The United States, not yet really maintaining one (CONTINUED ON INSIDE PAGE)

ROOSEVELT IS IMPROVED IN HEALTH

HAS ONLY TO SHOOT GAME FOUND FOR HIM

Will Soon Chase After the Nocturnal Bongo, a Rare and Exciting Sport

(By A. J. LAMBERT.)

LONDON, June 19.—When I left Nairobi on May 22, Colonel Roosevelt had reduced his flabbiness, which was so perceptible aboard ship, to a sturdy hardness and the equatorial sun had tanned him almost to a bronze. While his superlatives of delight were constantly uttered, yet Mr. Roosevelt plainly showed that he was satisfied with his overwhelming success achieved in hunting around the Kapitli and Athi plains.

His bag was enormous, but he is too good a sportsman not to appreciate that his experience was not altogether the real thing in big game hunting. It was too easy; was conducted too much on the principle of shooting pheasants on an English estate. To give unalloyed joy to such a lover of roughing it as Mr. Roosevelt, his hosts, Sir Alfred Pease, William McMillan, the St. Louis millionaire, and George Healey, had made extraordinary endeavors to make the hunt successful. Their perhaps over-zealous efforts resulted in making the shooting so easy as to become almost amusing. Practically all the Colonel had to do was to shoot any which way he was told to, as all the preliminary work of locating and rounding up the game was done by natives.

Game Rounded Up

This does not indicate that cold courage and accurate shooting were not required, as a charging lion or an angry rhinoceros is something to impart fear to the bravest. The Colonel stood his ordeal like a brave man, but his experience around Kapitli was not typical of what big game hunting really is. It is too much like leaving a comfortable rocking chair on a veranda to shoot some wild animal that happened to be passing.

While Colonel Roosevelt was naturally appreciative of attentions and kindnesses of his hosts, yet toward the end he viewed with pleasure the time when he would have to operate in a wilder country on his own hook, where even the slightest suggestion could not be made that the lions and rhinos he had killed were hand fed. He is now in that part of the country where he will get the full measure and real joys of African hunting.

Giraffe Country

Leaving the railroad at Kilbano station, for three days he trod through the waterless desert to the fertile, grassy plains and the thick valley of the Nile, which run from Guesonyo river to the German border. This is one of the best places in Africa for giraffes, it is also footers being easily obtainable. It is also one of the real homes of huge lions, 75 being shot within a few months. Trekking close to the German border where water is plentiful Colonel Roosevelt hopes to get a glimpse at an elephant. He is now fully 200 miles from the railroad in the heart of wild Africa where he can obtain obscurity to his heart's content.

After exhausting the possibilities of Sotik he will trek to Bidama vavine, where he may have a chance at the elusive nocturnal bongo. Only one has been killed by a white man. It inhabits the thickest forests. It is occasionally killed by the Wandirobe natives in the moonlight, who chase with dogs and say with poisoned arrows. Then Roosevelt will shoot in the Vastigahala plateau, one of the loveliest hunting grounds in the world, where he will find the five-horned giraffe. In the vicinity of Mount Elgon he will see herds of hundreds of elephants. His hunting both in Sotik and in the Vastigahala will be the real thing.

Delving Into Forest

Absence of news about Mr. Roosevelt for weeks need not create alarm, as the proverb "no news is good news," holds true in Africa. Should anything happen the buzzards at Nairobi would learn instantly. There is no danger to Mr. Roosevelt's health in Sotik and Vastigahala, both being remarkably healthy and devoid of those pests which infect Kapitli. When Colonel Roosevelt got into Uganda there will be some ground for apprehension on the score of health, but for the present there is none.

EMPEROR SENDS $100 TO ENGLISH ENGINEER

HELSINGFORS, June 19.—Emperor Nicholas has sent $100 to Coyne, the engineer of the British steamer Woodburn, who was slightly wounded when that vessel was fired upon Wednesday in Pihlas bay by a Russian torpedo boat for approaching too close to the rendezvous of Emperor Nicholas and Emperor William.

King Alfonso and Spain Interested in the Coming Of Another Royal Child

QUEEN VICTORIA OF SPAIN.

MADRID, June 19.—The latest announcement by the Gazette is that the interesting event impending in the Spanish royal family may be expected toward the end of the present month. What the Gazette does not state is that very little enthusiastic interest is taken in this "impending event." When Alfonso, prince of the Asturias and heir to the throne, was born two years ago there was great public rejoicing, amounting to a national fête. Something of the same feeling was shown when Prince Jaime was born a year later, but now one looks in vain for any evidences of exuberant interest. The plain fact is that Queen Victoria does not appear to the beauty-loving Spaniards as she did when Alfonso brought his pretty English queen to Spain. She has gained fat and lost much of her good looks. Courtiers are not shy in saying that her disposition seems to have changed with her appearance. Differences of opinion between the royal couple are by no means uncommon and the fashion of expressing those differences is not very effectually checked. Outside the palace the king is the happiest and most democratic monarch in Europe. He is only 33, is fit, but he acts like a boy. On the occasion of his recent visit to Valencia he spent one long, laughing day at the dower fete, made love to every pretty girl and took a wild part in the bombardment of blossoms. What he has been feeling toward her majesty, Victoria Eugenie, there is no doubt about that entertained toward King Alfonso. He is the best loved man in Spain today. The queen, it must be said, is a patient rather than a queen. Her love for her two children is unbounded and she is never so happy as when in the nursery. It has been arranged that 50 guns shall be fired if the coming royal babe is a boy and 13 if it is a girl—and it is an open secret that both the king and queen agree that having two boys, they hope the next addition to the royal nursery will be a girl.

LUCKY HERITAGE OF TWO HOLBEINS PUTS MANCHESTER ON HIS FEET

Can Pay All His Debts With What J. P. Morgan Would Pay for the Wonderful Portraits

(By VANCE THOMPSON.)

ARIS, June 19.—The Duke of Manchester, who married Helen Zimmernan of Cincinnati, has inherited two Holbeins of greater importance than he has discussed canvas which all England finally managed to keep at home, greatly to the disappointment of Mr. Frick of Pittsburgh.

These historic pictures have been in the Montagu family since hundreds of years before the creation of the rather modern dukedom of Manchester. The young duke says they came into the family through Queen Catherine. At all events, they now are at Kimbolton Castle. The duke believes they are not so valued that he cannot sell them, his object being to pay off the heavy mortgages which still hang over his Irish estate despite the assistance given by his Cincinnati father-in-law.

The most interesting of the two portraits is that of the boyish king, Edward the Sixth. It is a canvas five feet by four and was painted in the last year of Holbein's life, shortly before he died of the plague. It represents the young prince standing, a resolute little figure of a six-year-old boy.

The other Holbein is a portrait of King Henry the Eighth, possibly painted when the king was about 50 years old. The canvas is of the same size as the other. These rare portraits have long been known to collectors and never shared in the doubt of authenticity as is the case with many Holbeins in continental galleries. J. P. Morgan, who has been familiar with them, said that he would be ready to pay any price to the Duke of Manchester. If he receives anything like the price raised for the other Holbein he will have sufficient to pay off his mortgage and enough left for an occasional game of poker at the Travellers' Club at Paris.

Loving Couple

Baroness Von Hutton, formerly Miss Riddle of Erie, Pa., and the baron, her former husband, are much distressed over the published accounts of their recent divorce, fearing that the public may get the idea that there is some concealed or hidden difference between them. Both the clever authoress and her sedate husband declare there is none. They are divorced, to be sure, but are on the most friendly terms possible—even more so than when they were married. The Baroness has told her friends that the Baron got a divorce at her request, not on account of any difficulty between them, but because they did not care to live as man and wife any longer. It was the most friendly divorce ever granted in England, and the Baroness has been granted the help of the United States Consul in London, and is the second recent instance of the State Department's far-reaching concern for the matrimonial affairs of American heiresses abroad. Her visit to Munich was joint attorney for both the baron and baroness Von Hutton. There were no complaints on either side, except that of utter incompatibility. The baroness settled all her fortune on her daughter. As the royalties from her books bring her a handsome income and the baron

American Millionaire at War With French Authorities Over Artesian Well

SPANISH PRINCESS IS KIND TO AMERICANS

Marquis de Castellane Says Scepter of Beauty Passes From Mrs. Rutherford

(By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.)

PARIS, June 19.—William K. Vanderbilt, whose colors have been carried to victory on so many French race courses, is engaged in one of the strongest fights on record with a municipality—that with the well known racing town of Maisons-Laville, noted as the habitat of racing stables, jockeys, trainers and sportsmen generally.

The fight between the town and the man concerns the depth of artesian wells. When the New York millionaire built his stables at Carrière-Sous-Poisey he found to his great indignation that there was no drinking water in the neighborhood for his horses. Following the advice of an engineer he sunk an artesian well to the depth of 550 yards. The well gave a plentiful supply of water, but left Maisons-Laville dry.

The town council set at work at once and had a well sunk one hundred yards deeper than Vanderbilt's source of supply. Again were the Vanderbilt horses left thirsty, but the New Yorker's engineer is once more at work making a well seven hundred and fifty yards deep. And the water of Maisons-Laville again seek their level at Poisey to slack the thirst of the New Yorker's race horses.

Mr. Vanderbilt has instructed his engineer to keep his well one hundred yards deeper than that of the Maisons-Laville, even if necessary to sink to that part of the earth where it grows hot, or to pierce this planet altogether. This rivalry about the depth of a well is unique.

Kind to Americans

American women desirous of entering the charmed circle generally fasten upon some accommodating and popular princess or duchess. For several seasons the Infanta Sualle, the strictly aunt of King Alfonso of Spain, was most in demand. This year the Infanta is supplanted by the Princess and Princess De Bourbon De Braganza. The prince is a grandson of the late Don Pedro, emperor of Brazil.

The Prince and Princess have been entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Payne of Boston, by Mr. and Mrs. George Harbeson of New York, by Judge and Mrs. W. J. English of California, by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Younger of San Francisco and ever so many others. So thoroughly democratic have the grand children of the Brazilian emperor become that, like the Bourbon princess, they will accept an invitation to a good dinner almost without question.

New Beauty Queen

The sceptre of beauty has passed from the United States. I am sorry to record the melancholy fact. Last year, as you know, the beautiful Mrs. Rutherford reigned; and for many a season we have had to admire the beauties sent to us from New York and Chicago and San Francisco but that is over. A new beauty has come to us from South America and such a one as Paris has not had the joy of acclaiming for more than ten years.

Madame Moreno—that is the name which for a week has been on every tongue—has just come to us from Argentina. Her triumph was as sudden as it was splendid. In an hour Paris opened its arms to this splendid beauty. On the rare tracks, in the theaters and especially in the Duc de La Paix—the street of Parisian elegances—there is no one called off by Madame Moreno.

Who is she? We have hardly asked. She is young and slim and queenly. She is said to have an immense fortune and all the virtues. And that is all we know about her. It was her ambassador who made her known. Her beauty did the rest.

The Mohammedan Women Rebel Against the Harem in Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt, June 19.—Mohammedan women of Egypt, including members of the Khedivial or reigning family, have started a campaign to win for their sex the right to have a voice in choosing husbands, to put aside the veil which hides their beauty, and to pass at will the doors of the harem, although their sex may lead to precipitate where men abound. Conservative leaders are discussing the movement as of paramount importance.

There was a meeting a few days ago of the Grand Opera House of upwards of 4,000 women representing the cream of society. Speeches were made by Princess Aisha and others of prominence, which brought out a unanimous vote for resolutions demanding freedom from harem life, the abolition of the veil, permission to be in the society of men, and the right to be courted.

The resolutions have been forwarded to the Khedive and his cabinet. There was a meeting a few days ago of the Grand Opera House of upwards of 4,000 women representing the cream of society. UNITED STATES MUST STRIKE AN ALLIANCE WITH ENGLAND FOR THEIR JOINT PROTECTION IN OLD CHINA

LONDON, June 19.—James Hamilton Lewis of Chicago sailed for New York today. Discussing his tour of the Orient, from which he has just returned via the Trans-Siberia route, he said:

"I must still decline to state what mission took me to Asia. I shall report to the State Department at Washington matters in which I assume it to be interested. Apart from this I give it as my judgment that America will be involved in conflict in China in less than ten years. The United States will have to make an alliance with England in Asia for the mutual protection of British and American commerce, or be forced singly to contend with Germany and England for a place in Asia. With Japan and China harboring secret animosities against the United States for refusing the open door in America for Asiatic people and Asiatic goods, while we demand the open door in China for American capital and American goods, the Germans in the Orient are doing all they can to incite a dislike of Americans and English and an opposition to English and American commerce."

As to Germany

"I feel that the German government is ignorant of the course pursued by its representatives in Japan and China against America and would not approve if it conscious of the deliberate misrepresentation of America and its objects in Asia. Certain German sources in Japan and China have circulated the charge that America is preparing to aid in the dismemberment of China and aiding England to swindle Japan in all commercial matters. The Berlin government I am sure does not sanction this slander."

PRINCESS DE SAGAN'S SON JAY IS UNHAPPY AT HOME AND VERY SAD

PARIS, June 19.—Little Jay de Castellane has just recovered from the measles. His mother, the Princess de Sagan, did not dare to visit him during his illness, and he was left to the care of a footman, who was an inefficient nurse, opened the window on the third day of the boy's convalescence, causing him to catch cold in his eyes, from which he has not yet recovered.

Jay was out yesterday for the first time and played gleefully in the Avenue Du Bois, near the pink palace. A small American girl who tried to get him to join in her games ran home to tell her grant the women's demands. The faithful rebels challenge any one to point to a single text in the Koran proving that intention. In fact, the women cite the Koran in support of their emancipation.

No law compels women to take a husband designated solely by relatives. Eminent lawyers say the courts will hold that the women have the right to choose husbands, because the law applied now only in theory, provides that the bride's consent to marriage is essential. Immemorial custom his so construed. It is that the bride is never present when the wedding ceremony is being celebrated, her consent having been obtained by proxy. The heroine of the Grand Opera House meeting was a beautiful Egyptian, who denounced the custom which requires a maid to take a husband at the command of her parents, and become the mother of the children of a man she never saw before her wedding. "Children by an utter stranger" was the way the speaker expressed it.

BATTLE LUST SEEMS IN THE AIR

British Peace Agents Welcomed by Kaiser While Funmakers Are Busy

OLD WORLD IN A STATE OF DREADFUL GLAMOUR

Famous English Writer, William I. Stead, Still Sees Red in Lines of Diplomacy

(By WILLIAM T. STEAD.)

LONDON, June 19.—The European situation is most paradoxical. Everyone agrees that the one danger to peace is the rivalry in armaments between Britain and Germany. The breakneck competition in Dreadnaughts continues unabated. Next month the British cabinet will decide (secretly against its wishes) that the maintenance of the naval supremacy on which the existence of the empire depends will demand the construction of the additional four capital ships which it was hoped would not need be built. For the Germans "without hate and without prejudice" are steadily pushing on their shipbuilding and with the English the supremacy of the seas is a matter of life and death.

Australia has offered to provide an additional Dreadnaught and throughout the whole empire there runs the thrill of expected combat. Notwithstanding the most vigorous efforts of the English the Colonial editors have just passing a resolution in favor of universal compulsory military service.

Friendly Feelings

Yet, at the same time, three additions are being made to the armaments which are crushing the peace of the world, the peoples of Germany and of England are making the most pathetic attempts to promote friendly and paternal feelings between their respective countries.

English Christendom, established and non-established, Catholic and Protestant, has for the first time in its history, acted as a unit in sending a message of peace over a hundred of the picked representatives of all the churches to plead for peace and friendship. Bishops and deans, chairmen of the free churches and Catholic priests have gone on this mission of conciliation and peace. They are welcomed with the utmost hospitality by all shades of German religious opinions.

Labor Honors

Before the clerical commission reached German shores a hundred of the picked representatives of British labor had been welcomed with the utmost hospitality in the great industrial centers of Germany. Nowhere among the peoples is there heard a dissonant cry. Everywhere the universal cry is for peace and friendly relations.

Yet the armaments race with preparations for war is as ever going on in an enchanted land. Nobody wants war, and least of all the statesmen and sovereigns of Europe.

Lord Cecil's Opinion

As Lord Hugh Cecil said to me today, "There is no longer any question of going to war for markets because the profit of any new market would not pay one per cent upon the money that such a war would cost."

Neither does either state covet its neighbor's territory, for the cost of enforcing a lawless rule of the Ottoman empire makes annexation a weakness instead of a strength to a state. Still the work of preparation for active hostilities goes on.

Cretan Affairs

There is an actual war cloud on the eastern horizon. It is the question of the island of Crete, England, Russia, Italy and France have hitherto supplied the joint military and naval forces necessary to secure the autonomy of Crete. The period of the occupation is drawing to a close. The Cretans claim to be allowed to annex themselves to Greece. The Turks protest that no consideration, financial or diplomatic, will induce them to surrender their shadowy sovereignty over the island which since 1868 has been parcel of the Ottoman empire. If the four powers in accordance with the provisions of the convention, withdraw their force, fighting may recommence and when once blood is flowing in a war between Turk and Christian, anything may happen. Turkey has succeeded in staving off the evil day for a time, but postponement does not mean eradication. It seems preposterous that armies, three million strong, may be set in motion because of a dispute as to the political status of 300,000 islanders.

Poor Russia

But it is possible. Poor Russia is out of the fighting and Austria no longer held in check by fear of Russian invasion, may seize the opportunity of a Turkish-Greek war to make her long threatened advance to Salonica. The paralysis of Russia destroyed the equilibrium of Europe and no one can say what convulsions may come before the delicate balance of power is re-established.

Mr. Carnegie's objection of perfection as to the use of American naval power to punish the aggressor are not taken seriously here. All that could be done in that direction is for America to put herself at the head of a league of neutrals which, when any quarrel threatened to become acute, would collectively surround the disputing powers to bring into force the peace-making machinery of The Hague on penalty of sealing the neutral market closed to their goods. The dread of an organized boycott of the recalcitrant belligerent by the other signatories of The Hague convention would be a most powerful weapon to be used in averting war.

Anent Marconi

To turn to more pleasant themes, I had an interesting talk today with Mr. Marconi on the subject of the development of wireless telegraph. He maintained the cable is doomed and that the future is to be Marconi's. He said that the Atlantic is five cents a word. He anticipates that in a short time it will be possible to communicate by wireless to Canada from Ireland at 2 cents a word. He expressed himself confidently as to the prospects of the new installation by which he expects to send Marconi's message from Buenos Aires to New York. After that the next step will be to telegraph via the Panama Canal direct from Plymouth to New Zealand.

WAR TALK ALL OVER EUROPE AGAIN

will not fit a couple of generations to come, be fit for representative institutions. Events must be confessed, go far to support this view, but the British Foreign Office is perfectly well aware that any continuance of anarchy can only have one of two results—the enforced intervention of Russia, or a voluntary attempt by Germany to step in these very troubled waters. Perhaps it is as well that Sir George Barclay, the new Minister, has not any previous expression of opinion entered up against him in the

ORPHEUM

The "Novelty Dancing Four" coming here for the first time is made up of a quartet of quick-stepping youngsters all of whom are graduates of the famous two duos known as Hughes and Marie and Raymond and Hall headed by Johnny J. Hughes of the former team.

"A Spotted Reputation," which is included in the novelties of next week at the Orpheum, is a not new dramatic episode in the life of a famous actress.

"Circumstantial Evidence" and numerous other successful miniature dramas in presenting it he has selected two admirable actors, Alford L. Pellaton and John J. H. the former in the role of the Governor and the latter in the part of "The Smiling Kid."

Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin, whose performance in the musical sketch, "Strolling Home," has been a star attraction at the Orpheum for the last week, will be retained on the bill.

"A Strenuous Rehearsal," the brilliant comedy playlet in which Claude Gillingsater and his company appear, will also be a feature of the coming week's show.

The Vinodhons, a new company of comedians from abroad, are to provide a combination of melody and comedy, and there will be new jokes, new songs and funny sayings by Billy Van.

ELL

Murtyne, greatest of America's mirror dancers, is a woman of uncommon beauty, and with marvelous grace she makes a number of new dances that are made extremely pretentious by startling lighting effects.

Kessale and Dunn, a white fete and black-face singing and dancing team, are a lively pair and they will prove one of the popular numbers of the bill.

This is the first of a new playlet on the program, entitled "Hi! O! Mother," that abounds in good, hearty laughs and a plenitude of comic situations. Miss Toma Hanton, in male impersonations, is a clever little woman, who makes many friends by her original and pleasing style of portraying the sterner sex.

Manager Cohn has two lots of new motion pictures this week that have just been released by the makers in Paris. They will prove a distinct sensation.

YE LIBERTY

Tomorrow night will be an important one at Ye Liberty Playhouse, for it will mark the appearance of the new company and the first Oakland presentation of David Belasco's greatest triumph, "The Girl of the Golden West."

Who has heard of "The Girl of the Golden West," and has not wished to see this wonderful play—the Western romance that held the attention of New Yorkers for nearly twenty years, and which has made a specialty business? "The Girl of the Golden West" is a play that has been played in over 100,000,000, and if the success of the play was known it would reach a sum beyond the imagination.

What has been the cause of this great triumph? In the first place, the play itself is a masterpiece of dramatic art. It is dealt with life truly and fearlessly, presenting incidents and happenings without theatricality. It is a play that has made a wonderful genius of America's master of the stage, David Belasco, a hero to present a picture of the early days of the West would ever remain a dramatic reality, and the play has been a success beyond his own expectations.

That is what made the play great, and it is what has made it a success. The script and methods, the Bishop players

Mrs. Fiske

Mrs. Fluke, whose redoubtable position as the foremost actress of the American stage, is enhanced by her wonderful acting in "Salvation Nell," to be played at the Liberty theater one week from Monday, is a woman of unusual histrionic ability in childhood have achieved in the years of maturity an enviable place upon the stage. Mrs. Fluke, under her maiden name, Minnie Mudders was one of the most widely known actresses of the early days of her debut career at the early age of three in the character of the Duke of York in "Richard III" in her father's company, he being a well known manager in the south and west. For several years in the same company child parts in the standard plays in "Richard III," "The Merchant of Venice," "Rip Van Winkle," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Ten Nights in a Barroom," etc. She was the original "Minnie Fritz" with J. K. Emmet and was

At twenty-three she was married to Harrison Grey Fiske at that time widely known as an editor and publisher, and at present Mrs. Fiske's manager and a producer. Then followed a temporary retirement from the stage during which time she lived quietly, devoting herself to writing stories and plays. Among the latter was "The Rose," played with success by the late Felix Morris; "Nor the Guiltless" by the Kendalls, "Fontenelle," played by J. J. Connelley, and "The American Clay," a comedy of American life, and "Countess Rouquine," written in collaboration with Paul Kester.

In 1893 Mrs. Fiske, at a matinee for charity, appeared as Nora in Ibsen's "A Doll's House." Her success was so inspiring that it prompted her immediate return to the stage. In her first tour Mrs. Fiske played "A Doll's House," "Caesarine," "Divorcement," and "Marie Delroche." In her second season she produced "Tess" and took New York by storm. Then came "Love Finds a Way" and two one act plays written by herself, "A Bit of Old Chelsea" and "Little Italy," again demonstrating her versatility.

"Frou Frou" was the next play, after which came her memorable production of Thackeray's "Becky Sharp" and her own wonderful delineation of Becky. "Mirand of the Balcony" was next and the next season she devoted to "Hedda Gabler" and 1905 "Leah Kleschna" for which she won a place of much merit, and 1906 "The Sign of the Cross" and "Doler." "Leah" served Mrs. Fiske her two seasons. Her next production was "Langdon Mitchell's" clever satire on divorce, "The New York Idea." Last season Mrs. Fiske again reverted to Ibsen, this time putting on "Rosmersholm," which she considers his masterpiece. This season her marvellous portrayal of the sick and well niggers, and her redemption through the power of great love, has proved one of the most emphatic of her careers.

It is very odd that while motteos live when made, invented and borrowed for every other room in the house, the bathroom should be motteos-less. OAKLAND, CAL., SUNDAY, JUNE 20, 1909

1. Here's an old crooked man in an old crooked house. For housekeeper he has a small crooked mouse. The windows were crooked, and so were the floors. You had to crook elbows when you went through doors. The walls were all crooked, made that way when new. If you stayed long enough you would feel crooked, too.

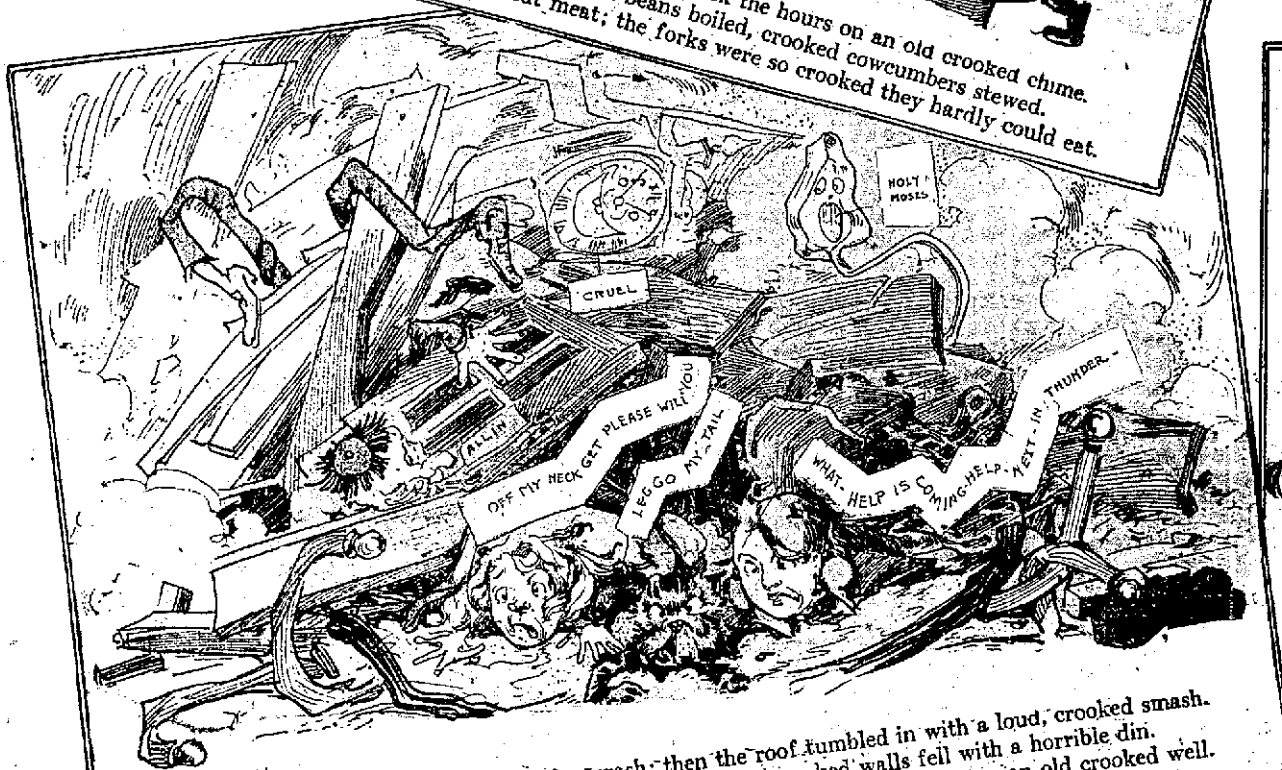

2. 'Twas a crooked old place in an old crooked yard; an old crooked stork on a chimney stood guard. The fences were crooked. Oh, nothing was straight, not even the hinges that held on the gate! It made you feel dizzy when you looked around—everything was so crooked, including the ground.

3. He invited them in—'twas about dinner time. The clock struck the hours on an old crooked chime. The table was crooked, and so was the food—crooked beans boiled, crooked cucumbers stewed. The knives were so crooked they wouldn't cut meat; the forks were so crooked they hardly could eat.

4. In the midst of the dinner the stovepipe fell down; it hit the old crooked man right on the crown. "Don't mind trifling details," said the crooked old man, as he cooked crooked eels in an old crooked pan. "'Tis what happens to men who exist without wives; they are bound, more or less, to lead sad, crooked lives."

5. The old crooked table fell down with a crash; then the roof tumbled in with a loud, crooked smash. The old crooked doors and the windows fell in; then the crooked walls fell with a horrible din. To complete the disaster, the crooked floors fell, and the crooked pig fell down an old crooked well.

6. The visitors crawled from this terrible plight and looked at themselves. What a terrible sight! Their legs were all crooked—they hardly could walk; their voices were crooked—they hardly could talk! But old Doctor Foster just hustled about and borrowed a wringer and straightened them out.

The Smartest Fashions of Well-Dressed Folk

Midsummer Eve

DEAREST MADGE:
Jack and I have come up here to spend a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Parsons at their delightful place, and I expect to find the visit doubly interesting because it falls on Midsummer, or St. John's Eve, when the villagers mean to follow the idea of olden days and hold a kind of fete round the three fires: the bonfire, the wood fire and St. John's fire. You remember the old story of St. John's Eve and the nymphs and fairies, and how the bonfires kept the wicked dragons away? St. John's fire was composed, you know, of bones and wood combined, and betokened the martyrdom of the saint. The fire of clean wood was meant to give light, just as the teaching of St. John was a lantern of light to the people. Very quaint and old-fashioned, is it not? Somehow, I expect to see strange monsters flying round overhead and tracks of little fairy feet in the soft moss. In any case, about 9 o'clock in the evening we are all going to walk down to the village and watch the dancers, Maid Marian, the clowns, Robin Hood and all his merry men. Our hostess has arranged for us to dine al fresco, so we will not wear dinner gowns, but will dress in pongees and foulards. Then when we stroll down into the village we will be comfortable and not too conspicuous. I only wish that we, too, might join the dancing and the fun, but Mrs. Parsons has vetoed our suggestion, so we are doomed to be mere spectators at the fun.

I will wear my blue crepe de chine, which is embroidered on bodice and skirt and finished with a band of black satin round the waist.

Mrs. Parsons says she will wear her frock of pongee slashed at the side and fastened over with embroidered cabochons. Her sleeves are also slashed and show undersleeves of tucked ecru chiffon. One of the most effective touches of the gown is a little band of gold lace which appears under the chiffon yoke at the front and back.

Another of the guests means to wear a foulard with a surplice bodice, edged with black satin and worn over a white chiffon yoke. Her black satin girdle is embroidered and her skirt is made full to follow the last decree of Paris couturiers.

I am sure we will all have a lovely time, and I only wish you were with us to enjoy the fun.

Affectionately,
ELEANOR.

Julia's Commencement Dress

"THESE caramels are delicious—who made them?" queried Peggy. Slitting tailor-wise on her cushion, she munched with glib delight.

"Why, Julia, of course," replied Beth.

"Julia always makes the best candy."

Whereupon Flora observed, as she reached for a wafer made also by Julia:

"I do wish she would come and share in the refreshments. Here she's been bobbing around for the last fifteen minutes and hasn't had a bite."

"Julia is foregoing for more tencups," drawled Peggy. Looking severely toward Flora, who was carefully balancing a cup on her fingertips, she added:

"And if you attempt juggling feats there'll be more cups to replace. No wonder Julia never has time for anything. She's always busy attending to you baronscum girls and keeping you straight."

"Please be just and include yourself among those who need a responsible guardian," Flora remarked pettily. "But I do think," continued she, "that Julia is a treasure. I don't know what we'd do without her."

Conversation was interrupted at this point by the arrival of Julia, who triumphantly cried, as she waved a cracked and battered tencup:

"It would hardly do for a social function, but it's something, anyway."

"Sit down," commanded Beth, "and eat some of your super-excellent caramels before Peggy robbles them all."

Soon every one was talking glibly about "commencement." For all were seniors at Hopewell School, and the following week they were to graduate.

"Well, girls," said Julia, merrily, "I'll be sorry to spoil the fine effort, but I don't see how it can be avoided. You know how dreadfully poor our folks are. They can't help it. I suppose—anyhow, I can't—so there's no use worrying. I'm by no means proud of being poor, but neither am I ashamed of it, and as long as you girls don't seem to care a very great deal, why, I suppose I can stand it. But I'm sure mother can't afford me a handsome dress. In fact, I won't permit her to get one. Therefore, you will doubtless see an charming fellow graduate in the plainest of plain gowns."

"You're the only poor person I ever liked," Julia said, frankly.

Her family was very wealthy, and she herself quite aristocratic. But Julia treated poverty as though it were the greatest joke, so that Peggy, who had an idea that all poor people should be mild and subdued, always making apology for their lack of riches, unconsciously found herself admiring Julia, who scorned to be sad or weepful, ashamed because she wasn't wealthy.

For years they had been the best of chums.

Julia drifted away upon another errand of helpfulness. No sooner was she gone than Peggy said, earnestly:

"Girls, we MUST see that Julia shows to just as good advantage as any of us. She probably would look as well in a cheap, simple dress as in any elaborate 'creation' any one of us might wear, because she's adorned by most anything."

And adorns whatever she touches," murmured Flora.

Without heeding the interruption Peggy continued: "But she has done so much for us that I think it's time we showed our appreciation. Now I suppose that we buy the material and make the dress ourselves. In that way, I think we can avoid touching her pride. I'll explain to her, in such a way that she can't possibly take offense. But we were bound to make some return for her kindness to us. If nothing else will avail, I'll deliver the lecture on 'Vain-glorious Pride,' which she is so fond of repeating to me."

With the greatest of secrecy and many subdued whisperings the dress was planned, and after many hours of labor, all unknown to Julia, the much-desired result was attained. A most charming frock it was, simple and dainty, and yet possessing an air of elegance all its own, with tiny tucks set in by loving hands, and a mass of filmy lace adorning it in every conceivable corner. And when Peggy added from her own store several dainty trifles to give it a last touch the girls gazed with much satisfaction upon their finished work. It was all ready in plenty of time for the reception.

Julia accepted the gift with the spirit in which it was given. Then her old habit of chaffing asserted itself, and she said, laughingly: "I see you couldn't bear to have Hopewell possess a shabby valetictorian. But even as she said this there were tears in her eyes that were not those of merriment."

THE ROCKING HORSE BEARS

Gretel's Message

DISCONTENT of the ugliest kind had seized firm hold of Arthur. But it is hard to be cheerful when you are ill; and it is very, very hard to be cheerful when you are almost well, but not well enough to go out and play. The doctor had said Arthur would be entirely recovered in three or four days, but the time of freedom seemed ever so far away.

"I do wish I were in Halloway," exclaimed Arthur, savagely. "Or, rather," he added, after a moment's reflection, "I wish I were over in the Black Forest of Germany, where we spent last summer. Auntie, do you remember the trip we took north from the Rhine, through the Hohenlath Pass?"

"Yes," replied Aunt Helen, "and I remember how delighted you were when you found the playmate in that rosy-cheeked little girl with the tawny hair, who lived in the quaint cottage we came across up in the mountains."

Arthur colored, for that was the very person he was thinking of. But, having the disdain of a 10-year-old lad, he said, indignantly: "Oh, pah! girls aren't of much account to play with. But say, couldn't my father make dandy wooden clocks? And I remember the fine rock- inghorses her big brother made."

Then he sighed so pitifully that Aunt Helen suggested a walk, in spite of the fact that she knew the doctor would object.

"Outdoors isn't as pleasant here in the city as among the fir and pines of the Black Forest, but you will at least gain some little exercise," observed she, pleasantly.

Down the main street walked the two. Presently they came in front of a toy- shop, in the window of which stood a big rockinghorse. Now, Arthur had ceased to care for rockinghorses a long, long time. It possibly might have been the thought of the tiny cottage in the mountains that made him say, impulsively:

"Let's go in and look around, Auntie."

Aunt Helen was glad that something had been found to interest the boy, so indoors they accompanied him. While they were walking down the street, heaps of playthings and toys of all sorts, Arthur absent-mindedly stroked the mane of another rockinghorse. His fingers encountered a slip of paper. Looking closely, he discovered that a sheet of paper had been folded and stuck with mucilage in the mane, so that it was hidden. In a moment he had unfolded it and was gazing intently upon sprawling characters written thereon.

"Read it, please, Auntie," he pleaded.

"I can't because it's in German," she said.

A look of astonishment passed over Aunt Helen's face, and then her eyes twinkled mischievously as she read:

"I am a little girl living near to Neustadt, in the Black Forest. My father makes clocks and my brother makes all kinds of toys. But I am a lonely little girl. I am sending this note by the rockinghorse, and I hope it will reach the little boy who played with me one day last summer. He could not talk German very much, but he was a very nice boy to play with. Gretel."

"Well, if that isn't rich!" cried Arthur, his eyes shining with delight.

Gretel's letter has come 'way over the ocean, and you've got to buy that rockinghorse for it's been such a good messenger. Not that I'm making a great deal," he added hastily, and flushing, "but just for politeness' sake, you know."

Auntie smiled and promised to purchase the rockinghorse. Then she and the much excited boy went home. That evening she told the wonderful story to Arthur's father. Of course, I can't say for certain, but I think their conversation may have had something to do with the announcement made after dinner.

"Well, Arthur, we start for Baden, Germany, in about a week. There I'm sure you'll soon be well and strong. Are you pleased?"

"Oh, I guess I can pass the time there all right," replied Arthur with studied carelessness. But his thinking countenance told just how very glad he was.

SAMMY TRIES TO FLY

SCHOOL had closed for the summer. With two months at his disposal, inventive Sammy naturally began to think of what he should do in this vacation period. His experiments and inventions had proved so expensive of late that he did not like to ask his father for money to go away on a long holiday.

"I can't because it's in German," she said.

A look of astonishment passed over Aunt Helen's face, and then her eyes twinkled mischievously as she read:

"I am a little girl living near to Neustadt, in the Black Forest. My father makes clocks and my brother makes all kinds of toys. But I am a lonely little girl. I am sending this note by the rockinghorse, and I hope it will reach the little boy who played with me one day last summer. He could not talk German very much, but he was a very nice boy to play with. Gretel."

"Well, if that isn't rich!" cried Arthur, his eyes shining with delight.

Gretel's letter has come 'way over the ocean, and you've got to buy that rockinghorse for it's been such a good messenger. Not that I'm making a great deal," he added hastily, and flushing, "but just for politeness' sake, you know."

Auntie smiled and promised to purchase the rockinghorse. Then she and the much excited boy went home. That evening she told the wonderful story to Arthur's father. Of course, I can't say for certain, but I think their conversation may have had something to do with the announcement made after dinner.

"Well, Arthur, we start for Baden, Germany, in about a week. There I'm sure you'll soon be well and strong. Are you pleased?"

"Oh, I guess I can pass the time there all right," replied Arthur with studied carelessness. But his thinking countenance told just how very glad he was.

OAKLAND WOMEN AS MUSIC COMPOSERS

MISS MAUDE WYNN

MRS. VIOLET RUCKER

MISS MARY LAMBERT

To set their thoughts to music is the ambition of many local musicians who are rapidly coming to the front as composers of instrumental and vocal music. Through the inspiration derived from the great masters of lyric, grand and comic operas the young writers of music imbibe their ideas. Although native genius is exemplified in their work they resort to the compositions of former generations which have set the so-called style of music.

However many entrancing melodies are being written nowadays with little or no reference to the works penned by the most gifted and versatile musicians. Originality of thought may be detected in the species of composition which Oakland women are putting forth in their musical work. Soul is infused in the notes and the less hush of the air are brilliantly painted in the classical and popular airs which the young writers of this city are producing. The beguiling sounds which have taken flight from their instruments are being appreciated by music-lovers.

Among the Oakland composers whose works are recognized in their compositions are Mrs. Violet Rucker who has added in this city for many years and is well known in musical circles. She distinguished herself by writing a song which she dedicated to Bryan and Kern who were Presidential nominees. It was sung during the Democratic campaign and greatly impressed the candidates. Mrs. Mary Bryan, the devoted wife of the defeated candidate, thanked Miss Rucker in a personal letter for the song. She is the author of many instrumental as well as vocal pieces. The following are some of them: "The Road to Old Virginia," "An Indian Wedding," "A Pretty Golden Poppa." All of the selections have been published.

Miss Mary Lambert who is known in the social and literary colony, is the author of many songs which have not yet been published. She has high aspirations and ambitions to become a noted composer. Miss Lambert has marked ability in musical lines.

Mrs. W. S. Palmer, a popular clubwoman of this city and Alameda has created a book of juvenile songs which is small enough to be carried in a pocket and large enough to be sung by many. She is one of the most gifted women in the city, where she has lived for many years.

Miss Roxana Wynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wynn, is a native of Oakland and has composed several marches, among them being "The Blue and Gold" which is full of expression. Among the other compositions are "The Mother's Love," "The Fire Patrol," "The Spaulders' Dream," "The Memory War," and the "Athen." A two-step her compositions are marked by their melody.

The King of the Belgians has offered a prize of the value of $500 for the best work on the progress of aerial navigation and the most efficient means of accomplishing it. Foreigners are especially invited to participate equally with Belgians in this competition and may send in their essays in their own language. All the essays have to be sent to the ministry of science and art in Brussels not later than March 1, 1911. The jury who will award the prize will consist of three Belgians and four of other nationalities.

Mrs. Ellen Collier, who at one time carried on business in Nottingham as a blouse and uniform manufacturer, has, after nine years, paid all her creditors in full, together with four per cent interest. It was in 1909 that Mrs. Collier decided to call her creditors together, when a first and final dividend of 2s. 4d. in the pound was paid. Though under no legal obligation, Mrs. Collier recognized a moral duty, and therefore paid every debt.

MISS ROXANA WYNN

KISSES SOMETIMES GO BY LAW AS WELL AS BY FAVOR

Though kissing is said to go by favor, yet it sometimes goes by custom, and occasionally by law. For instance, there is a custom connected with Hocktide at Hungerford, a festival which takes place every April. A penny tax is collected on that day by two well known residents of Hungerford, who are termed "tutty-men" and who go from door to door, each carrying a stove trimmed with gay ribbons.

It is not recorded whether this honorary post of "tutty-man" is put up to open competition, but it certainly ought to be, for there is one very valuable perquisite attached to the office—namely, a kiss from at least one lady in each family visited. It is said, moreover, to be the rub at Hungerford to yield graciously to this custom, especially if the "tuttyman" happens to be young and handsome bachelor.

"Beating the Bounds" is often associated with other remarkable customs, and at Maidenhead kissing is immemorially associated with it. May Day, old or young, rich or poor, who is encountered on the spot must have the fair alternative submitted to her of being either "bumped" or kissed. It speaks volumes for the good sense of Maidenhead that the vast majority of them prefer the latter alternative to the former, although they might prefer it as a private rather than a public function. Nevertheless, there are cases on record where ladies have chosen to be "bumped," and as this takes place on the boundary stones, they have probably repented, when too late, of their undue coyness.

Kissed For a Sovereign

Barge Day is a festival which appears to be peculiar to Newcastle-on-Tyne. It seems to be akin to the practice of boundary beating, for the mayor and corporation, who, doubtless, in older times used all to sail in barges, now embark upon four beflagged steamers, and, followed by two old state barges, steam up the river, to claim the soil of the Tyne. But the piece de resistance is reserved for the landing. A big crowd is always waiting on the "grave and reverend signers" and from the assembled multitude the mayor has the very delightful, but extremely inviolable, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases and giving her a kiss. For this osculatory performance she receives a golden sovereign.

It is said that there has never been a Mayor of Newcastle who has not deemed this privilege cheap at the price. Nor is that all. No sooner has the mayor received his kiss and presented his sovereign than the sheriff not to be outdone also chooses a fair lady, dubs kisses her, and presents her with a sovereign. But the fair maid whom the mayor has kissed has still another gift to receive, and this time from the sheriffs, who is bound by custom, whatever her feeling on the matter may be, to present with some useful gift the lady whom her husband has kissed.

Free Trade in Kisses

Has Won $90,000 With His System at Monte Carlo

After a fifteen-years' trial of a system which practically consists of betting high enough and long enough, Mr. Monty Walker has left Monte Carlo £18,000 the richer. He won £600 one day, and the next day, in a little over two hours won £12,000 more, which necessitated the table at which he was playing suspending operations for a few minutes while further funds were obtained. This is technically called "breaking the bank," and recalls the feat of "Monte Carlo Wells," the first man to break the bank at the famous gambling resort, who a few years ago won £40,000 from the Casino.

Wells played by a system, and afterwards explained how, stating with a certain capital, he bet on "runs" or "series," staking £20 or £40—the minimum or maximum bets.

Won 70,000 Pounds

Five years ago an immensely wealthy American, Colonel Dowell, the owner of mines in Mexico, won £70,000 at the Casino. His first day's play, which lasted less than an hour, brought him in £27,000, and each succeeding day had a similar story to tell. "Crowds dogged his footsteps whenever he entered the Casino, some of the ladies rubbing his shoulder or surreptitiously touching the hem of his coat for luck. While the more did not plunge, but continued to stake the maximum of £400 each time. The result was that he came away richer by £70,000.

His bank count once carried away £14,000 as the result of a single night's play, while a North of England shipowner won £6000 in a couple of hours. On another occasion a Yorkshire colliery owner left Monte Carlo, after a three weeks' stay £15,000 richer than when he left home, but in the same month the wife of an English peer lost £25,000 in one night and £20,000 on the night following.

A Costly Defeat

One of the most remarkable incidents which ever happened at Monte Carlo was when a Mr. Jaggars won £50,000. He kept a close watch over the roulette wheels at the various tables, and discovered that each one had some small defect which resulted in one number winning more frequently than any other. These numbers he backed, winning £120,000. The bank, however, discovered his secret, had new wheels made, and Mr. Jaggars was losing rapidly when he wisely desisted and returned home with £30,000.

One of the distinctions enjoyed by the late Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, the uncle of the Czar, who died in November last, was that of being amongst the men who had broken the bank at Monte Carlo. He won something like £60,000 in a couple of days, and it may be remarked that Lord Villiers, heir to the earldom of Jersey, was credited a short time ago with an extraordinary run of luck. Starting with a capital of £2100, a sum which represented only five maximum coups, and playing only one hour in the evening, always on black, he won £30,000 in a few days.

The Bank Wins in the Long Run

But, in spite of all these huge sums which have been won, the bank holds its own against all systems, plungers, and persevering gamblers, and, as a witty proverb invented in the days of M. Blane, the founder of the Casino, truly says, "The black often loses, and the red often loses, but while (Blane) lives, the bank always wins." And his winnings range from £1,000,000 to £1,500,000 every year. Well might one remark that he who breaks the bank today will be broken by the bank tomorrow.

Etiquette Which Rules THE SEA AND SAILORS

Wireless telegraphy, of course, has to a certain extent revolutionized old-fashioned methods of ship signaling, and in the case of the recent foundering of the Republic we had a striking demonstration of the value of Mr. Marconi's invention as applied to the transmitting of distress signals at sea. Although vessels many miles distant from each other can now talk by the aid of wireless telegraphy, however, flag signaling is still used, as hitherto, when one vessel is passing another and wishes to ask or answer a question.

Juniors Dip to Seniors

Flag etiquette is, in fact, strictly observed by captains of vessels, for by its means they are able to act in a courteous and polite manner toward one another when on the high seas. For instance, when two liners belonging to the same owners sight each other at sea they hoist flags immediately, and in passing the junior captain always dips his ensign to the senior captain. Then, again according to that nautical authority, the editor of the Shipping Gazette, if two liners belonging to different owners pass each other at sea, and the captain happens to be acquainted, the master who realizes that he is the junior invariably dips to the other ship.

Tramp Steamers and Liners

In the case of a British liner sighting a foreign liner there is no definite practice, but, as a rule, the commanders of foreign liners courteously dip to any large British liner they meet on the high seas. It is just a matter of courtesy, and often the commander of a British vessel will run up his ensign first.

A certain code of etiquette exists, too, between the tramp steamer and the liner. If a tramp steamer approaches a liner, it is not customary for the latter to hoist her flag unless the tramp takes the first step. Then, as soon as it is seen that the cargo boat has hoisted her flag, the liner responds. Mail and passenger liners, for instance, when passing along the coast of Portugal, may sight dozens of cargo steamers, and naturally enough, will not show flags unless it is a tramp does first. But if a dozen or more cargo boats hoisted their flags to the liner the latter would be expected to acknowledge them.

In the case of iron-clad, all merchant ships, tramps, or liners dip their ensign, whether British or foreign. Signaling between British vessels and merchant ships has received a good deal of attention during recent years, and both naval officers and merchant officers welcome an opportunity of signalling to each other. In fact, commanders of liners rarely sight tramp steamers at sea that do not have their ensigns flying as soon as the liner is in sight.

It is nearly half a century ago since the system of sea signaling called the "International Code of Signals" was compiled in consequence of action taken by the British Board of Trade, and adopted by nearly all the commercial nations of the world. The system consists of eight-ensign flags and a code pennant. In using and interpreting these signals it is, of course, necessary to be in possession of the signal-code book, in which the meanings attached to the flags and combinations of the flags are printed. Each nation, however, prints its own copy of the signal book in its own language, and thus two ships totally ignorant of each other's language may converse by means of these flags.

Some Women Who Have Given Away Millions

The most charitable woman in America—possibly one of the most charitable women of all countries and of all times—is Mrs. Leland Stanford, who has given millions to the causes of charity and education. Ignoring the munificent gifts which Mrs. Stanford has made to hospitals, institutions, nursing homes, etc., she can place to her credit the sum of $5,000,000 which, from time to time, she has given to the university which was founded by her late husband and herself in memory of their son, Leland, who died when little more than a boy. This great University, known as the Leland Stanford Jr. University—is in Palo Alto, California, and ranks as the foremost educational institution in the West.

The charitable acts of Mrs. Russell Sage are as well known in England as they are in America. Mrs. Sage, like Mrs. Stanford, takes a great interest in education, and much of her fortune has gone towards the support of various colleges and institutions. Mrs. Sage has, of course, a favorite object for her wealth, and this is the Russell Sage Institute, which she has done much to support during the last few years. If Mrs. Sage's free gifts be all added together they will be found to amount to con-

Kaiser William's Opera Bill

Some interesting statistics are published regarding the extent to which the German Emperor personally subsidizes the Royal Opera House and the Royal Theater in Berlin. Of a total of £125,000 expended on them by the Prussian budget, £22,500 is contributed from the Kaiser's private exchequer. In addition he bears the annual deficit, something like £15,000, sometimes as much as £20,000.

Thus the Imperial patronage of dramatic and operatic arts represents the big sum of over £40,000 per annum. Even this, however, does not exhaust the list of the Kaiser's theatrical expenses, for every time he commands a performance, the seats for which are distributed to his personal guests and friends, he must buy out the entire seating capacity of the theater, averaging a total of £250 for each such affair.

Miss Helen Gould is, perhaps, the best known of all feminine American philanthropists, though her charitable gifts do not exceed £2,000,000. Miss Gould has no "favorites" to which she gives her money exclusively, but helps to support any institution which appeals to her generous spirit. She is very varied in her "giving," and personally investigates every case brought under her notice. Her morning's mail usually contains 500 letters of a begging description, and it was a great tribute to her judgment in her judgment when he left her his entire fortune "to distribute as she thought fit."

Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan—the wife of the railroad king—has a fortune of many millions in her own right, and applies a generous percentage of it to the support of religious institutions. She is credited with having dispensed in this way over £1,000,000. Mrs. Winthrop, the wife of a well-known millionaire, has also distributed £1,000,000, the majority of which has gone towards the upkeep of Princeton University.

Mrs. A. A. Anderson, the wife of the well-known artist, A. A. Anderson, who is also Ranger of Yellowstone Park, is also a generous woman in the states. She is particularly interested in education, and has already given away £500,000 dollars for this object alone. Her husband is credited with possessing the biggest and most costly studio in New York.

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

By MARION HARLAND

"Lemon juice was added to over sweet syrup."

IMPRIMIS. don't say "jelly"! Although the young housewife in Miss Alcott's inimitable "Little Women" did bewail her evil case when her currants wouldn't "jelly," take time to say "jelly." At this point I digress from the main line to entreat correspondents to snatch, or make, time in writing to me to use the little personal pronoun "I." Don't say, "Would like to ask" or "Would say" in beginning a sentence. Write, "I should like to ask" and "I would say." I have to supply the missing pronoun in putting MSS. into printable shape. Say, likewise, in writing a recipe, "Let it stand," instead of "Let stand."

I believe "jelly" to be a New England provincialism. Hence, "Meg's" use of it. I have heard the shaking mould of translucent conserve offered to the guest in a Massachusetts farmhouse spoken of as "jelly." The monosyllable falls lawfully into line with other curtailed words under the new regime of orthography. When we cut off and drop into the waste basket the stately terminations of "prologue" and "catalogue" and make "thru" do service for "through," we may be thankful to have the body of our "jelly" left to us.

A few precatory words to the directions for putting up small fruits in this form may not be superfluous.

NOT OVERRIPE

The berries must be fully ripe, but not what is called "dead ripe." The old saying that current jelly will not be firm unless put up before the Fourth of July has this proviso of perfect ripeness as a warrant. The housemother who understands her profession has learned that, in most instances, there must be acid in the fruit she would jelly. Blackberries, strawberries and red raspberries, even the wild blackcap, if really ripe, do not jelly easily. The mixture of currants and raspberries, of which I shall speak presently, owes form, as well as flavor, to the red juice of the tart berry. Blackberry and strawberry jelly, if there be no addition of lemon juice or other acid, must be set in uncovered glasses in the hottest June sunshine or the vertical rays of the July sun for several days. The evaporation may "boil down" the conserve to the right consistency. I have never been successful with peach jelly, except when lemon juice was added to the over-sweet syrup. This is the reason why the small fruits should be gathered in their prime and before the sugared juices would be cooked into cloying sweetness.

Red Currant Jelly.

Gather the fruit on a sunny day. It is not necessary to strip it from the stems on which the clusters grow. In fact, the succulent stems contain an acid of their own that adds to the flavor of the jelly. Wash the fruit well, draining it in a colander, and pack into a stout stone or agate-jar. Put on a close cover and set the jar in a pot of cold water. The water should come more than two-thirds of the way to the top of the crock. Set the pot on the side of the range and about your other duties for an hour or more. Then look into the jar, and crush down the heating berries with a wooden paddle. Move the kettle to a warmer place and close the jar again.

I usually heat the fruit all night, setting the pot over a very slow fire that will die down before morning. Before breakfast I visit the kitchen and examine the fruit. It is invariably broken all to pieces and, if not cold, quite cool enough to handle with comfort. It is then turned into a bag of doubled cheesecloth and suspended over a wide bowl to drip. A long-legged, backless chair is set, heels upward, on a table, the four corners of the bag are lashed to the inverted legs, high enough up to allow the bowl to stand beneath. While we are at breakfast, the juice drips steadily, and by the time the meal is over, the pulp, or "pomace," is almost dry. The residue of the juice is expressed by squeezing. If there be a pair of manly hands which are both willing and strong they are coaxed into service for this part of the work. A few dexterous twists of the crimsoned cloth and half a dozen mighty squeezes leave the pomace juiceless. The pulp is emptied into the garbage pail and the bag thrown into cold water to soak.

Measure the strained juice and put it over the fire in a preserving kettle. Weigh out as many pounds of sugar as you have pints of juice. Divide the sugar into three or four portions and spread each upon a platter or a shallow pan. Set these in the oven, leaving it open for the first ten minutes and stirring several times. Close the oven when the sugar in the kettle begins to simmer, but watch the contents of the platters, lest the hot sugar begin to melt. Stir often. When the juice boils hard skim off the scum and when the boil has lasted twenty minutes dump in the hot sugar as fast as you can, stirring vigorously. After it has dissolved, which will be very soon, let the syrup boil exactly one minute.

Four the jelly into small tumbler which you have rolled over and over in hot water to prevent cracking as the jelly fills them. The glasses must be taken directly from the hot water and filled while wet. At this stage of the process an assistant is needed to fish out the glasses and pass them to the main worker. If these rules be followed, and the fruit be ripe and not overripe, the jelly will form by the time it is in the glasses. Let it get perfectly cold; pour melted paraffine on the top of each glass and fit on metal tops or, if you have none, paste paper covers on them.

In over forty-five years of jelly-making I have never lost a glass put up according to this recipe. The flavor of the fruit is preserved far better than when juice and sugar are cooked together in the old way and boiled down thick. The jelly is clear and sparkling. Keep in a cool, dry place.

Black Currant Jelly.

Make as above. It is highly recommended for coughs and as a tonic. It is more palatable if the black are mixed with a third as many red, ripe currants.

Current and Raspberry Jelly. Allow one part of red currants to two of red raspberries; heat both kinds of fruit together and proceed as I have directed.

The flavor is exquisite. It is particularly nice for jelly roll or for layer cake.

Gooseberry Jelly and Jam.

Top and tail the berries and heat them as for other jelly. They are very juicy, and if all the liquor that will flow from them after adding sugar were put with the jam it would be too thin. Therefore, turn the berries when soft and broken into a colander; let them drain without pressing or shaking. When most of the juice has run into the bowl below empty the colander into a preserving kettle after measuring the berries. Bring to a boil; add a pound and a quarter of sugar to each pint of berries; stir to dissolving and cook steadily half an hour. Put up in jam pots, covering with paraffine, then fitting on tops.

For the jelly, strain the juice through a cheesecloth bag to get rid of the seeds that have escaped through the colander; measure it and heat as for other jelly. When it has boiled for twenty minutes stir in the heated sugar, a generous pound to each pint of juice, gooseberries being very acid.

Green Gooseberries.

These may be put up in like manner making a delicious jelly for meat. The jam made of the reserved and unpressed pulp, or "pomace," needs nearly a pound and a quarter of sugar for each pint of berries.

Red Raspberry and Pineapple Jelly.

Wash a ripe pineapple and cut it small without paring, the skin holding a peculiarly fine flavor. Set it over the fire in a farina (double) boiler and cook very tender. At the same time heat red raspberries enough to give out glasses in the sun for two or three days before the jelly will form.

Blackberry Jelly.

This is made in the same way and subject to the same inquiry as that which attends the strawberry. It is worth putting up in liberal quantities for family use. The flavor is fine and it is extremely wholesome, also a native in cases of summer complaints. As the contents of the glasses shrink by evaporating fill one from the other. Out of a dozen glasses you may get nine when they have been sunned into consistency. Don't try to boil it down. It will injure the taste, darken the color and, ten chances to one, succeed in producing syrup, not jelly.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

FROM a generous batch of helpful hints and full directions for the preparation of foods and the amelioration of the housemother's more arduous labors I draw as many as I have room for today. The manuscript, clear as print and as graceful as the coppelatte characters in which our forbears took pride, has lain in my drawer marked, "Good! Use!" longer than I like to recollect. Nothing but lack of space is responsible for delay.

1. Lay tumblers down on their side in hot water and roll over quickly, and they will not crack in washing because the glass expands evenly.
2. When obliged to stand long on a hardwood floor let it be upon a rubber mat, or if you have not this upon a very heavy woolen rug. Since I provided one for my husband she stands at the ironing table the usual number of hours without the usual fatigue. One of my friends has all the shoes worn by her servants furnished with rubber heels. It is a saving of health and, incidentally, of the polished floors.
3. In a handsome new church the women laid linoleum over the hardwood floor in the kitchen to save failure.
4. If in doubt as to the sweetness of the cream for coffee do not put it into the cup and then pour the hot liquid upon it but pour in the coffee and then stir in the cream. It will not curdle, as it is likely to do if the cream goes in first.

This was told to me by an expert waitress, and I have found it invaluable.

4. "A cure of prevention" is as good a rule by which to save wear, time and stitches as it is with regard to health. Put skirt band on the bottom ruffle of silk petticoats. It will prevent fraying, and it also gives a little additional stiffness to the ruffle. Then put in, when required, a dust ruffle of good, not heavy, skirt lining instead of silk, and the skirt will retain the new look for a long time.

5. It may not be generally known that fresh pineapple is a perfect digestive agent for meat eaters, enabling those who need meat diet and find difficulty in digesting it to eat all the flesh they wish.

This was told to me by a noted dietitian, and has been of great value to many who would otherwise be obliged to forego eating meat almost entirely.
6. Put up a double quantity of cherries this season, and next winter use them in gelatine and in tapioca puddings in place of other fruits. The flavor is very appetizing, and the rich red makes a pretty dessert dish.

7. To make a wholesome and nutritious dish for a semi-invalid, bake lima beans as you would navy beans, adding to each cupful of the beans a tablespoonful of salad oil instead of the usual pork used for the New England dish. (Charles, Ill.)

assurances of grateful esteem?
It is news to me that pineapples are a digestive agent. I take it that our informant means the juice and not the fiber of the fragrant tropical fruit.
The fiber is sometimes so near akin to woody splinters that some stomachs cannot digest it. It should be better known that the juice of fresh pineapple is considered by some specialists in diphtheria and putrid sore throat. It cuts the false mucous membrane, which is the dangerous symptom in such affections. It is likewise prescribed in cases of croup.

A Recipe From "The Colonel"
Herewith I make bold to tender two suggestions that may be of advantage to some members of the Exchange:
To Prepare an Orange for Fasting.
Pare away the outer rind very thin, as you would peel an apple without waste. Next, and this is the important point of the process, beginning at the stem end, cut without tearing it or losing a drop of juice, leaving the orange perfectly bare and clean. Break the lobes apart, or open it in any way you like.

Codfish-and-Potato Hash.
Codfish in quantity to suit your taste. Hashed potatoes, well seasoned. Pick the codfish and soak in water overnight. Chop it fine with the potatoes, in the proportion of one-fourth fish and three-fourths potatoes. Cut two large slices of fat salt pork into dice and fry crisp. Mix the cracklings of the pork, the potatoes and codfish in the skillet and heat until browned lightly. Turn and brown the other side. Serve with mustard-and-then-S. S.

"THE COLONEL" (Fox Lake, Ill.)
I make a shrewd guess at the significance of the brilliant ending of "The Colonel's" epistle, but I am not sure enough that I interpret it aright to impart the information. He knows how to write recipes. The same might be said of other men who undertake cookery as a pastime or a profession. None of our correspondents has yet answered the question I put some time ago to the constituency at large, "Why are men better cooks than women?"

For Canning Citron
Some time ago you printed a recipe for canning citron. I cut it out and put it aside, but I am blessed with some mischievous little hands that must have got hold of the clipping and lost it. As I am very much in need of it (or shall be) you will oblige me greatly if you will inclose it to me.
I enjoy the Exchange immensely, and feel much indebted to it for many helps. Mrs. H. W. McE. (Aurora, Ill.)
I find no directions for canning citron among my recipes. Nor do I recall the publication you speak of. We have had directions for canning and preserving citron. Can any one let us have what this writer wants? I should like to oblige her.

Portieres From Silk Rags
In reply to queries respecting silk portieres a valued correspondent writes:

While in college I helped to sew silk rags for several different pairs of portieres, which looked as well as new fifteen years later.
Cut the strips a little narrower than for carpet rags and join carefully. Then have them woven with either a silk or linen warp.
Last summer I made a pair, using linen carpet thread of various colors. It was a very firm curtain, but silk finished threads, at 25 cents for six yards, is just as good, as it will wear as long as the silk and gives a brighter effect. I put a border eighteen inches wide of black top and bottom, next six or eight inches of red and blue in the middle. The curtains have been greatly admired. They are particularly suitable for "dens." One is at a single seven-foot door leading into a library closet in which wraps are hung. We have two slumber robes of the same material, and I had in all but one-half a gunny-sackful of silk pieces.
O. T. A. (Corning, Iowa).
Your communication is marvelously satisfactory and concise. If our helpers only knew how it irks me to cut down their letters, or to hold them over for weeks and months when I am longing to print them, and let others get the good of them, they would study brevity. As you have done. Did you learn the knack in college?

Fraternal Aid

Fraternal Aid Council, No. 840, met last Thursday night, June 17, in Castle Hall. The meeting was presided over by President Brother Hill. There were several applications for membership. Brother Hanson of Berkeley gave an interesting address. An unusually interesting business meeting was enjoyed. The convention was discussed. The success of the convention depends on every member doing his part. The order means no more to one member than to another. Share its benefits equally. Best that share of responsibility gracefully and promptly. Brothers Clough and Meado and Sister Dunlap will furnish an interesting program next meeting night.

Appomattox Corps

Appomattox Corps, No. 5, will hold its monthly whist tournament Thursday afternoon, June 21, at 2 p. m. at I. O. O. F. Hall, corner Elwood and Franklin streets. Mrs. Susan A. Bell is chairman, assisted by Mrs. M. J. In and Mrs. E. J. Bell. Mrs. Elizabeth McNeil, Mrs. Annie Goodwin, Mrs. Lucy Collins, Mrs. Beatrice Duncan and Mrs. McFarlin. Prizes will be awarded.

Americans

The Americans, Oakland Assembly, No. 2, held a most enjoyable and interesting meeting at Castle Hall Wednesday evening. Much interest is being shown by the members in the numerous courtships which are in progress. Oakland Court No. 2 is going to be the recipient of a large banquet for these victorious efforts. Each meeting night a large number of candidates are initiated and a large number of applications voted upon. The members never fail to recognize the determination of the order to unite the heart of every American with patriotism, and always express their ap-

Nothing is spared to inspire the social side of the order and therefore the program is practically free. Every member is urged to be present next Wednesday evening.

Ladies of G. A. R.

Geo. H. Thomas Circle, No. 32, Ladies of the G. A. R., held a very interesting celebration in honor of the sixth anniversary of Flag Day, at Hotel Argonaut, San Francisco. The tables were beautifully decorated with ferns and flowers of a golden tinge. Mrs. Belina S. Bailey, past national president, was the honored guest. After a delicious menu a delightful hour was passed in response to toasts. Mrs. Geo. H. Miller was toast mistress. Toasts were given by Mrs. G. W. Merrill, who extended greetings, and Mrs. Elizabeth Merrill, senior vice-president.

In honor of absent president and treasurer on account of illness, the assembly sang a rose for a moment of silent prayer.

"Salute to the Flag," directed by Patriotic Instructor Mrs. G. Robinson; "The Day We Observe," Past National President B. S. Bailey; whistling sketch, Mrs. J. L. Crittenden; "The Home, the Circle of Patriotism," by Mrs. T. S. Bowdler; song, "Star Spangled Banner," Helen Heath; "The School, the Kindergarten or Good Citizenship," Mrs. H. C. Eunkor.

Sons of St. George

Albion Lodge No. 208 held its regular meeting last Wednesday evening at Pythian Castle and the attendance was splendid. Brother Joseph Lancaster continued his interesting experiences from Japan, India, to New York city, and Oakland. Brother Lancaster left Oakland April, 1908, for a tour of the world and returned to Oakland last month. He and his family, and has given great pleasure to the members by an interesting description of his exploits and experiences while en route. He finished his lecture and retired amid applause, when a standing vote of thanks was given him by the present Sons of St. George.

Brothers Writon, McHenry and Williams to the accompaniment of Brother R. H. Millson and were much appreciated.

Native Sons

A large and enthusiastic meeting was held by Oakland chapter No. 59, N. S. G. W., at Pythian Castle Wednesday evening. The feature of the evening was the election of officers. W. D. The young ladies will serve light refreshments after the distribution of prizes.

Rebekahs

Last Tuesday evening Abbot Invidia Rebekah Lodge No. 11, held its regular weekly session in Potter Hall, 1422 Grove street, near Nineteenth. Noble Grand, Jeanette Fonda, presided. The district deputy president, Dr. Minnie Pratt, was present and occupied the "seat of honor" at the right of the noble grand. Many visiting Rebekahs were present, to witness the initiation of two candidates into the "mysteries of the degree" and the officers did their work in a very creditable manner. The officers and members of Abbot Invidia have been invited to be present at Zenith Rebekah Lodge of Point Richmond next Saturday evening, June 19, to witness an initiation. They will meet at the corner of Broadway and Fourteenth street at 7 o'clock, where they will take the county line car for Richmond. Next Tuesday evening, June 22, Abbot Invidia will give a prize masquerade party.

The resignation of Sister Carl secretary was accepted and Sister Jeanette Fonda was elected to fill the secretary's chair for the ensuing term. Pleasant remarks were made by the district deputy aid visitors.

Knights of Pythias

Like Oak Lodge No. 17, K. of P., had a splendid meeting last Wednesday evening, when Pages Gladys Newman and Frank P. Hanson were advanced to the rank of Esquire. The application of Alex. Abramson by initiation was received and put through the regular course. After the meeting adjourned the social committee announced they had prepared a little celebration for the members present. The chancellor command led the grand march to the banquet room. C. C. B. M. Reidsma in well chosen remarks requested the brothers to enjoy the hospitality of Live Oak lodge. While the 40 Palenates were passed around, Supreme Representative George Samuels and others addressed the gathering. The knight rank will be conferred next Wednesday on several Esquires in amplified form.

Members and visitors are requested to be present. Invitations will be distributed by the members for a Ladies' Night, to take place Wednesday evening, June 30. A musical and literary program will be presented, with a special feature consisting of an exhibition drill by the degree team of Calantha Temple of Pythian sisters of twenty-five uniformed young ladies, to conclude with dancing.

A hall will be given by Liberty Company No. 11, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, at the Rice Institute, Seventeenth street and San Pablo avenue, Friday evening, June 25. It will be an initiation affair. Cards may be secured from the members of the company or from the committee of arrangements, which consists of Lieutenant J. J. Neagle, Lieutenant H. R. Flier and Sergeant George Collier.

Pythian Sisters

Loyal Temple No. 47, Pythian Sisters, will have installation of officers Wednesday evening, July 7, and initiation of four candidates. The officers elected are as follows: P. C. Catherine Brandon; M. E. C. Agnes Lewis; E. S. Beale; Ball; E. J. C. Allen, M. of T. Mary Muller; M. of E. C. Lena Austin; M. of F. Lilly Samuels, P. of T. Carolyn Brasher; C. of O. T. Mary Fleming; trustee, Louise Holmes.

A social evening will also be held on that occasion. Sister Lilly Samuels, supreme protector, will be the installing officer. Members are requested to be present.

Woodmen of World

Forest Camp, No. 102, W. O. W. held a well-attended and enthusiastic meeting last Monday evening. The inspiration being the report of the action of the sub-committee appointed by the Alameda county committee to make arrangements for a big class initiation on August 10th, on which date the twentieth anniversary of the birth of the Pacific Coast jurisdiction will be celebrated. Neighbor Al Trower of Oakland camp is the chairman of the committee and A. J. Blodan of Bay Tree secretary. W. H. Morrison represents Forest Camp.

Addresses were made by Neighbors Phillips, Stetson, Sommers, Lowenberg, Jeffries and Allen. All exhorted the camp to put forth its best efforts to make the gathering the most successful one in the history of the order.

On this occasion Head Consul Cook and the head managers will be here from Denver, and it is proposed to present them with a class of not less than 200 candidates.

The committee met on Thursday night and selected a committee on hall and program. The details of the ritualistic work will be arranged at the next meeting, to be held Thursday evening.

The following officers were elected to serve Forest Camp for the ensuing term: Consul commander, Arthur Nelson; vice lieutenant, James B. Allen; clerk, Gus Wiede; assistant clerk, George Stetson; banker, John Jeffries; escort, John Blowski; watch man, Harry Orbell; secretary, James G. Kane; managers, Arthur Hughes, J. E. Whitehead and W. S. Angwin.

A joint social between Forest Circle, Women of Woodcraft and Forest Camp will be held this month.

Fraternal Brotherhood

A large attendance gathered at Oakland Lodge No. 123, on Friday night, in Pythian Castle, and the members were in full uniform and put on the hour work in splendid style. No. 123 is justly proud of the accomplishments of its drill team.

The committee on arrangements for the public drill of the Uniform Rank of Southern California, which will be given here July 19, has secured the use of the Piedmont Skating Rink, in which to hold the exercises of the evening. Two hundred hand-picked uniformed men of the Fraternal Brotherhood will display their military maneuvers.

On arrival of the train bearing these members from Los Angeles en route to Seattle, the entire party will be served with refreshments at the lodge room, Twelfth and Alice streets.

As the time for the picnic draws near the enthusiasm increases, and everyone is talking about the picnic, which occurs July 5, at East Richmond Park.

By request of the lodge a communication was ordered sent to R. N. Chapell, district superintendent, asking that R. MacKenzie, former organizer, be returned to work with our lodge again in securing members.

There were three members added to the sick list and two dismissed, the reports showing that calls had been made on all the sick ones during the week.

Judging by appearances, Cupid has been busy in the lodge, as many young people are pairing off for housekeeping. Brides are quite the thing at present; there were two present at the last meeting. The end has not yet been reached as more will follow.

Next Friday night will be an open meeting. Friends are invited to attend.

Mechanics

Last Tuesday evening the Junior Order, U. A. M., met in regular session at Lincoln Hall, Thirteenth street. The meeting was transacted, that being the last meeting before election of officers. The whist party at the home of Courter Bourn was a success. Court Lady Alvida Nicholson carried off the hand-painted china, while Mrs. Lucy A. Collins and Walter Tupper carried off the "consolation."

Next Tuesday evening will be the semi-annual election of officers, when a large attendance is expected.

Royal Court

An unusually large attendance gathered last Tuesday evening at Oakland Assembly No. 35. Worthy Chancellor George C. Trott, provided considerable business was transacted, that being the last meeting before election of officers. The whist party at the home of Courter Bourn was a success. Court Lady Alvida Nicholson carried off the hand-painted china, while Mrs. Lucy A. Collins and Walter Tupper carried off the "consolation."

Next Tuesday evening will be the semi-annual election of officers, when a large attendance is expected.

Red Men

The chiefs and members of Uncas Tribe No. 121, I. O. R. M., met in regular session Friday evening, June 11, at their wigwam on Twelfth street. The meeting was occasioned by a banquet and fraternal spirit which has always manifested itself in the past, is being eclipsed at every meeting.

The faithful braves have been working quietly and zealously among their pale face friends, with the end that an adoption will be held on June 25, at which time a class of candidates will be initiated into the mysteries of the order.

Election of officers was held June 4, and was followed by a banquet and entertainment. E. H. Burnett and M. A. Sluifer have announced that in conjunction with the initiation of officers in July, corn and venison will be served unspicingly.

The policeman smiled and took the car to Washington boulevard with a chauffeur and a timer for a test. He returned within an hour and reported that the machine couldn't run more than ten miles an hour.

Paste this sheet upon a sheet of heavy cardboard; let it dry thoroughly, then cut out parts of the figure around the heavy black lines, pierce the white dots in each piece, then join parts together by knotting a piece of string on either side (A to A, B to B, C to C, D to D, E to E, F to F, G to G), as in diagram. Lay the figure upon its face, fasten a piece of string from 1 to 1, 2 to 2; have the strings long enough so that the arms and legs hang loosely at the sides. Fasten one piece of string to the center of each of the other strings, so that it drops below the lower string, as in the diagram; hold the figure by the head, pull the last string attached and watch your minstrel do his fancy dancing.

PRESIDENT MAY YET ABANDON COAST TRIP

Necessity of Rest Likely to Interfere With His Trans-continental Journey

FUTURE PLANS DEPEND ON WHEN CONGRESS QUITS

Many Eastern Engagements Must Be Filled By Taft Next Month

WASHINGTON, June 19.—President Taft has given up the notion that he will be able to leave Washington for the summer on July 3. Accordingly it was announced at the White House today that on the above date the President will take Mrs. Taft and the children to Beverly, Mass., and then on to the several engagements that he has made to return to Washington and stick it out alone at the White House until Congress gets ready to quit.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma, Democrat, said today that he believed Congress would end its work by July 10, but that is the earliest date yet put forward since the complications injected by the President's special message.

Many Engagements

The President would take his family to Beverly the first of July were it not for engagements to speak at the unveiling of the Stephenson G. L. R. memorial in this city July 2. After the Stephenson exercises the President will take his family to Massachusetts. After visiting his family at Beverly the President will go to Norwich, Conn., July 3, to attend a celebration of the founding of that city. From Norwich the President will go to Albany where he will be joined by the New York State Committee, in charge of the New York features in connection with the Centenary celebration at Lake Champlain. The President will spend the afternoon of July 6 at Fort Verde and July 7 at Fort Verde. The President will be in the city of the celebration at Burlington, Vt., where the President again will be the guest of honor. Leaving Burlington that night the President will be back in Washington sometime the 9th.

Mrs. Taft Improves

Mrs. Taft's health is improved so that the President may be able to make his contemplated Western trip. Congress adjourns in time to give him a rest before starting on such a long journey. But if the President is here in Washington until the summer is over, it appears probable that he will be forced to leave for the West at a later time.

ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL TO BE GUEST OF HONOR

There will be a banquet given in the Hotel St. Mark by the Oakland Council of the Knights of Columbus tomorrow night. The spread will be in commemoration of the sixth anniversary of the organization of the Oakland branch of the order. The festivities will be presided over by Grand Knight Dodd of the local order. Archbishop O'Connell of the diocese of San Francisco will be the guest of honor and undoubtedly will be given a hearty welcome to the city.

having his room-mate flee also and make a double pursuit the more difficult.

With all the developments and discoveries following the finding of the body of Miss Sigel concealed in a trunk in the deserted room but one conclusion has been reached by the police and that is that Leong Ling was the murderer. The beautiful young girl after forsaking family home and friends for the love of the man she had met and adored with in the name of a trust was led to a room and trusting victim to her death in the Chamber of Mystery to a final and fearful struggle in which the horrible revelation was made to her that she had given her love to a monster and a heathen who had profaned the religion she had devoted herself to teaching to gratify his own mean ends.

Slow Death

With her coming to the room where the man she expected to marry lived she was told that she was to be his wife and trusted was to prove true and that she would find happiness even to the full extent of her prayers. Instead she found a slow and horrible death—a death such as the police had been expecting for years as the outgrowth of the practice of women of beauty and culture mingling with the Chinese of the city in mission and Sunday schools allowing them to call at their homes and meeting them on terms of equality in the regards of Chinatown.

Denies Own Daughter

The father Paul Sigel a son of the same name here in his pride refused to admit that the victim of the Chinaman was his daughter. He was a full daughter, her mother who introduced her to the work was today removed from her home to a sanitarium, her mind temporarily weakened from shock and grief over the fate of her daughter.

Hope Is Gone

Put this slender reed of hope was broken and in the end it admitted that the girl who had been found in the trunk was his daughter. The wording was that of a mother and not an alienated woman like his daughter who would never have used the phrase "soon Sunday night." In fact when the telegram was sent this day that his daughter disappeared it was addressed to him and read "I will be home soon Sunday night. Don't worry." E K S.

MOTHER SAYS ELSIE SIGEL IS ALIVE AND WILL NOT ACCEPT BODY

NEW YORK, June 19.—Mrs. Franz Sigel, widow of Paul Sigel's brother, acting for the family, issued the following statement late tonight: "Elsie Sigel is not dead. We are convinced she has wandered away in a temporary fit of mental aberration and is now alive, either roaming about aimlessly in the lower parts of the city, where she carried on her missionary work, or in some other city where she strayed without knowing where she was going. "I do not recognize the body in the morgue as Elsie Sigel. We are absolutely positive and by me I mean every member of the family on this point. We have all examined the body and are positive it is an entirely different person from Elsie Sigel. "We will not accept the body as Elsie's and will not bury it."

Professes Christianity

Phon of her apt pupil Mrs. Sigel gave special attention to his teaching and was convinced when he professed his belief in Christian religion and became one of the prize pupils of the mission school.

Makes Love to Girl

Occasionally Leon drifted back to New York and renewed old acquaintances. Among those were Mrs. and Miss Sigel. Eighteen months ago Leon came back to the city and got work as a waiter in the Chinese restaurant. He met Miss Sigel now a grown woman, and made love to her. She received his attentions and the objections of her family and her friends did not move her. To the surprise of the members of the Sigel family Leon appeared at their home in Washington avenue, in the late afternoon of June 8 and told Sigel that he would like to marry his daughter. This proposal was received with indignation by the father and the Chinaman was ordered from his house.

Pathetic Letter

This call is believed to have resulted from the pathetic note written by Miss Sigel to Leon and which seemed to have touched him. It read: "You seem to be growing cold to me. Just think of the sacrifices I have made for you—my family my friends. For I do not forsake me. The note, instead of appealing to the man to whom it was addressed, appeared to have served as a warning that he had carried on a relationship that might prove troublesome to him. He carried to live the same free life by way of the mission field he must get rid of the young woman whose devotion to him had reached a tragic stage. He made an appointment, a her home to meet Miss Sigel on the following day. In the morning she disappeared from her home. She met Leon and perhaps by a promise and a pretext he led her to the room in the Eighth avenue building over the restaurant.

Evidences of Struggle

None in the room after she had been pushed into the belief that the greatest weakness of her life was about to be revealed. Her gentle, unassuming, soft-spoken and persuasive voice suddenly changed to a demoniacal scream. Taken to a room Leon sprang upon her, caught her by the throat, and she screamed and then she was beaten and her body was in a state of confusion. Quickly Leon was in the struggle, remnants of Chinaman stripped off to make identification more difficult. Leon took bound the girl by stockings. Then he wrapped it several stout awning ropes over her shoulders and around the body up nearly double the body was drawn. The young man, resting on the bed, unconsciously gripped the girl and then jammed down in a sheet. A trunk that had been lying on the floor was pulled open and the body was thrown overboard. It was quickly snatched up and the body was thrown overboard.

Frightened Away

I suppose why Leon was frightened away and did not carry out his plans was evidently contemplated the shipment of a trunk. Becking his room mate, he made a hurried flight, going into the Washington according to the belief of the police.

FORGER SUSPECT FINALLY LANDS IN PRISON

Man Captured in Chicago and Held at Marysville Is Returned Here

SAYS HE WAS VICTIM OF HYPNOTIC SPELL

Admits He May Have Passed Bad Checks—Wanted in the East

James Roy Martin, also known as Douglas Ryan Emerson Schwartz and Curtis, has been arrested by Captain of Detectives Peterson of this city for passing fraudulent checks on the furniture firms of Bussey & Reed and Hook Brothers. At the time he was apprehended Captain Peterson was ignorant of the general reputation of this prisoner. During the process of identification, however, he found that the man who gave the name of Dr. Curtis corresponded in every physical particular with James Roy Martin wanted on charges of forgery in Boston, Kansas City and other places. Peterson then put the fellow through the third degree and says he obtained statements which established the man's identity.

Admits Possibility of Guilt

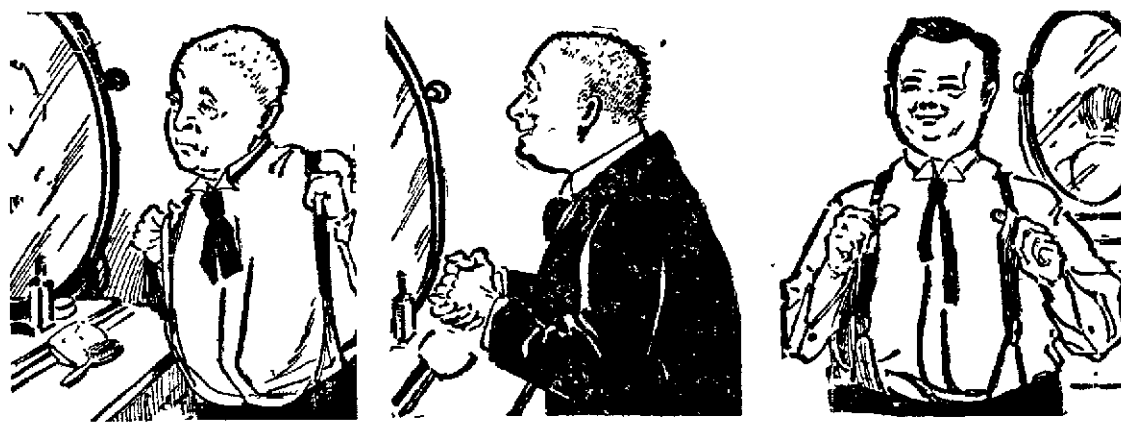

Martin or Curtis admits that he might have passed the checks but accuses a hypnotist whom he calls Dr. Le Rue as being responsible for his downfall. He says that he traveled with Le Rue for a few weeks, during which time he was robbed of $500 and placed under an hypnotic spell. While under this influence the arrested man says he might have passed spurious checks.

First Police Crawl

A request from Pasadena for the arrest of the man gave Captain Peterson his first crawl. The description from the south tallied with that of a man who had passed checks on Bussey & Reed and Hook Brothers traced the man to Chicago where he was arrested. He was returned here.

CONFER ABOUT SUGAR TRUST CASE

Government Attorneys Seek Information Relative to Huge Loan of $30,000,000

PROMINENT FINANCIERS WILL BE WITNESSES

Grand Jury in New York Will Probe Into Secrets of Sugar Refining Company

NEW YORK, June 19.—United States District Attorney Wise was in conference today with George H. Earle, receiver of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company, to discuss the $30,000,000 loan to a Philadelphia firm, which the government attorneys hope to bring against the sugar trust, based upon investigations of the trust's financial affairs.

On the other hand, the attorneys of the trust were all set to go out of town over the week end, and the offices of Parsons, Goss and McDevine were almost deserted. It was said the members of the firm had no official information that the government was making an investigation of the trust.

Mr. Wise and his assistants have been busy for two days marshalling the array of witnesses that the government hopes to bring before the grand jury and planning the preliminary steps in the legal battle.

Among the men who have voluntarily consented to testify for Mr. Wise and the receiver of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company are: H. Snowden Marshall and ex-Governor Frank S. Black, who together, represented the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company in a recent suit.

Gustav Kissel, the broker who negotiated the loan to the sugar trust, has also been subpoenaed to tell what he knows about the transaction as well as the clerks in his office who served with him as directors on the board of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company.

Mr. Kissel has had to postpone a trip to Europe in order to respond to the summons.

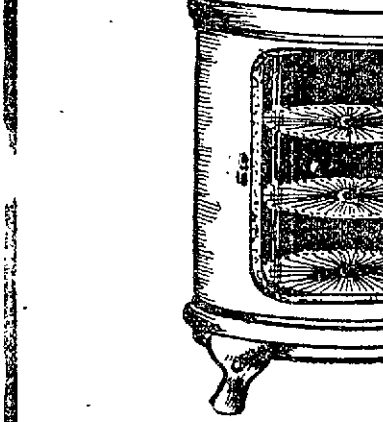

Mr. Wise declined to make any statement today. He said he was too busy.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED BY CALHOUN JURY AFTER BEING OUT TWELVE HOURS

Will Deliberate Again Today and Report to Court at Noon

Met Calhoun

Sanderson testified that Reuf introduced him to Calhoun facetiously as a defeated candidate for the office of District Attorney and an officer of the North Beach Improvement Club. Sanderson said he had told Calhoun that the people of North Beach were anxious to know when they would be given the same transportation facilities as the other districts of the city, complaining that they were obliged to trudge through a mile of burned territory.

Calhoun, according to Sanderson, replied that if the people of North Beach desired transportation facilities they should co-operate with the United Railroads by appearing before the Board of Supervisors the following Monday and urging the passage of the overhead trolley franchise.

Franchise Valuable

Sanderson testified that the franchise was a valuable one and that he felt the city should receive some reimbursement for granting it. Calhoun thought the United Railroads was paying all the franchise was worth in constructing the road, Sanderson said, and the talk became general on the popular protests against the disfigurement of Market street with overhead poles and wires.

Ruef then joined in the conversation, according to Sanderson, and pointed out that the building of the road would give employment to 6000 men in San Francisco and take them away from the refugee camps.

"The Examiner is charging your administration with corruption and will break your back if you persist in this policy," Sanderson testified he said to Ruef.

"To hell with The Examiner," was the reply of Ruef, according to the testimony of Sanderson. "No public man can afford to follow that newspaper. This thing goes through next Monday."

And then came a brief dialogue between Calhoun and Sanderson, the reading of which to the jury yesterday had a significant effect in the silent courtroom.

"You don't need me, then?" Sanderson said to Ruef and Calhoun.

"I don't think so," the transcript made Calhoun reply to Sanderson.

That was all, but it would be difficult to find four words that would produce as intense an effect as they did on the spectators watching the jury.

Watch Jury Closely

How the jurors regarded the significance with which the words might be freighted they did not indicate. Three or four of them continued to lean forward while the stenographer re-read the cross-examination of Sanderson by Earl Rogers. The remaining jurors relaxed as if they had come to some decision on the matter in dispute.

Whether or not this decision was favorable to Calhoun nothing but the verdict of the jury will disclose.

HISTORY OF CALHOUN CASE IN BRIEF

May 3, 1907—Patrick Calhoun and Thorne Mullaly declined to testify before the grand jury.

May 14—Fourteen indictments were returned against Patrick Calhoun, Thorne Mullaly, Abe Ruef, Eugene E. Schmitz and Tilly L. Ford.

May 15—Defendants released on $140,000 bonds each.

May 27—Defendants arraigned before Judge Lawlor. Cases put over until June 1.

June 21—Attorneys for Calhoun attempt to prove grand jurors biased.

September 3—Judge Lawlor denies motion to quash indictments against Calhoun. Defendant pleads not guilty.

December 6, 1907—Case set for trial. Owing to Gallagher's non-appearance put over until Dec. 3.

January 12, 1909—Beginning of trial. After three months jury is sequestered.

April 15—Francis J. Heney delivers opening statement to jury.

April 19—Case goes to jury.

The matter, saying that anything they might say would be purely speculative. It was evident, however, that the incident had a pronounced significance to the attorneys of both the prosecution and the defense, and the re-reading of Sanderson's testimony was easily the most tense detail connected with the appearance of the jurors in court after they had retired for deliberation yesterday.

The jurors were taken in a bus to the St. Francis last evening, returning to the court at 9 p. m. Police swarmed around the jurors as the balliffs were seeing them into the bus, and the crowd around Carpenter's Hall was kept on the opposite side of the street.

Had to Be Good Natured or Be Run to Prison

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—It was a good natured crowd that waited all afternoon for a verdict in the Calhoun case. They had to be good natured or else they would have been run to prison.

No one was allowed in the court from the hour of the defendant's leaving, shortly after 1, until 2:30 p. m. During this time a large multitude assembled outside the hall, and presented numbers of reasons to the officers why they should be admitted, but no party was shown in and in consequence the episode of the arrest of George Dehan in the morning was almost repeated several times.

However, the majority of those who had congregated took on the spirit of the occasion and didn't mind being prodded with the club or pushed by a stentorian six-foot policeman with the badge of authority on his breast.

Suydam's Smile Wore Off When Not Chosen Foreman

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—It was a source of great surprise to those who had watched carefully the associations which had been formed and the cliques which had appeared on the jury, that George G. Gillespie was chosen foreman. The general best bet on who would be thus honored was that Charles Suydam, the young wholesale grocer, and apparently the happiest man in the bunch, was chosen for that honor.

Maybe he expected it, too, at any rate he looked as though he were plunged in the depths of despair as he sat without a smile on his face, buried in gloom, during the reading of the Sanderson testimony. Gillespie, however, had been also cheerful throughout, although he didn't seem to like it when Heney made mention of Rogers' smiling at him last week.

Burns' Sleuths Had Opinions, All Right, All Right

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—As soon as the jury had retired for the second time, all of the Burns sleuths were authority for the statement that Calhoun was as good as convicted.

"There's no immunity there," said one.

"They can't impeach Sanderson," volunteered another, and so on with glowing faces they congratulated themselves and their associates and seemed generally to be well contented with the situation.

Neither Heney nor O'Gara, both of whom were present, would express an opinion.

Photographers Stir Things Up In Courtroom

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—Two newspaper photographers plying their vocation industriously in and about Carpenter's Hall this afternoon came in for a stern rebuke at the hands of Judge Lawlor, who threatened to send them to jail for contempt.

The picture men wanted to make a flash-light of the defendant and his counsel.

"Seats at the Ball Game Are Hard"

Corner Store, Eleventh, at Franklin, Oakland, of course.

As they sat chatting among the spectators in the courtroom, Judge Lawlor said, No. So they hit upon a scheme to ask Captain Gleason. Gleason had been informed by one of his trusty aides of his Honor's ultimatum, and he calmly sprang the decision of the chief power on the newspaper men.

"They decided to jump all authority and just take the photo and let 'em holler afterwards. But the judge, too, had sources of information and he went running all excited down the aisle of the courtroom."

"I bet you got yourselves into antagonism with the court," he cried. "You'd better look out."

And forthwith every officer on duty was instructed to draw his club and his revolver, if necessary, at the sight of the next photographer who raised his camera.

Mrs. Calhoun And Daughter In Courtroom

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—Never before in the history of the so-called graft trials has interest been so keen and the result waited for with such expectation as was exhibited by the good-natured crowd that assembled in Carpenter's Hall tonight.

Judge Lawlor, however, was not a ripple of excitement to stir the quiet of the atmosphere and save for the restlessness of a few of those present, among whom the defendant was not one, it might have been supposed that an entertainment was going on and that a solo or a piano selection might at any moment be rendered from the region of the empty stage.

Indeed, some of the audience, endeavoring the large piano and treating the audience to a bit of ragtime, but the idea was not carried out.

Mr. Calhoun was the center of a group of friends during the entire evening and a steady stream of well wishers wandered in and out of the court room, offering their regards to him and their hopes as to the result. The defendant's two older daughters and his son were with him throughout the night.

All the members of Mr. Calhoun's counsel were also on hand, as were Thorne Mullaly, William Abbott, Charles P. Black, R. Porter Ashby, Luther Brown, A. B. Maywood and numerous others.

On the prosecution's side of the case Assistant District Attorney John O'Gara was the only representative unless the small army of Burns' sleuths, headed by W. H. Russell, are to be included.

Shortly before 10 o'clock, Rudolph Spreckels put in an appearance. He went to the witness stand and was later joined by James D. Phelan. This was the first visit paid by the former mayor since he testified on the stand some weeks ago. He was attired in a natty gray overcoat which completely enveloped him, and the tone of his easily recognizable voice were frequently heard above the general hubbub as he argued dilatorily on some point of interest.

For more than two hours the throng waited, Judge Lawlor had not put in an appearance. He was not allowing the occasion to prevent his evening's enjoyment. At 11:05, however, he arrived in an automobile, and immediately the crowd instinctively called themselves to order and waited patiently until he should take his seat on the bench.

Patrick Calhoun Calmly Reads Evening Paper

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—If one could judge by outward appearances, Patrick Calhoun was merely waiting for the result of an automobile race, or news as to the turning of a business deal.

He carefully perused an evening paper, looking through the various news items from all parts of the country and then took up a comic supplement.

"My, but they do get up silly things these days," he remarked, and then turned aside to ask a friend who had just come up as to what he thought the jury was doing.

Attorney William M. Abbott sat most of the time talking to the defendant, and a great deal of interest was shown by both when at 4:15 the jury filed into court.

Ousts Lawyers Who Stop for Chat on Street

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—Judge Lawlor was awfully careful with the jury. Not only did he keep the blinds down in their debating room on the third floor of Carpenter's Hall, but he would not allow anybody across the street. The defendant was not molested as for fifteen minutes, shortly after 10 o'clock, he walked up and down in the sunshine with Rudolph Spreckels, a well known insurance broker, and close personal friend, but when Attorney Ewington, Rogers, Barrett and Stanes Moore held a consultation for a moment on the corner they were quickly removed by bailiffs and the jury.

It would be impossible for a juror to see them unless his vision permitted him to look through a stone wall.

The group of attorneys protested good humoredly, but McCarty had his orders, and refused to play any favorites.

Judge Lawlor Eats Candy and Smiles Calmly

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The only person in the entire court room who appeared calmer at his ease when, after four hours and twenty-seven minutes of deliberation, the twelve jurors filed into court, was his Honor, Judge Lawlor. Himself, going through the preliminary articles, the jurist sat calmly on his revolving chair, munching candy and smiling quietly to himself, looking in every expression of his face, his apparent indifference as to the result of the long trial.

He seemed to become lonely during the forty minutes of reading and called over Bailiff Coyne for a four-minute chat, and Stenographer Charles Sagan for another little talk. With the latter he shared some of his sweets, and when the jury had again retired he went into seclusion once more in his chambers.

MEN CURIOUS AS TO WOMEN

Will 'Rubber' to the Detriment of Business, Says New York Jeweler

NEW YORK, June 19.—As long as women wear skirts and stand over open grinders in the sidewalk man's curiosity will get the better of his judgment.

This was the argument which Henry Keil, who keeps a jewelry store at 224 Chrystie street, used with success before Justice Gleason in the Supreme Court today. Keil was granted permission to cover up the grating in front of his store, because the bakers who work in the basement below insist on studying every dirty pair of hose that is aping the legs of the women.

"I bet you got yourselves into antagonism with the court," he cried. "You'd better look out."

And forthwith every officer on duty was instructed to draw his club and his revolver, if necessary, at the sight of the next photographer who raised his camera.

Everybody Gets Excited, but It Is to No Purpose

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—A short half hour after the second retirement of the jury the group of spectators who were taking the air on the street, as well as the audience in the court room, were plunged into the highest excitement by the balling rapping for order, and Judge Lawlor ascending the bench.

"A verdict, a verdict," was whispered here and there among the throng. But alas, it was a false alarm, and almost immediately the congregation was dismissed, and the judge's occupation of passing the time away was continued.

Attorney O'Gara had more to say to the jury than he had in his previous thirty days in which to answer the charge of exception in the case of John Byrne, convicted of murder, and under sentence of death.

The fire department was called on to extinguish a small blaze last night at 3743 Ruby street, caused by a defective gas stove.

The house is occupied by Mrs. J. T. Killian. She was preparing the evening meal when the blaze started. The damages were nominal.

Financier and Actress to Wed

August Belmont and Elinor Robson Will Marry in Europe This Summer

LONDON, June 19.—It is reported on very excellent authority that the engagement of August Belmont and Elinor Robson is soon to be announced and that the marriage of the actress and the American financier will take place in Europe this summer.

It is impossible at this moment to confirm the report. Miss Robson, who crossed on the liner St. Paul from America, reached Southampton today. The information, however, comes direct from one of the parties concerned.

Will Receive Bids on Stockton Street Line

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—At Monday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors the bid for the franchise of the railroad planned for Stockton street will be received for the franchise necessary to be obtained before the enterprise can be carried forward. It is not expected that any other offer will be received, though there have been rumors that the United Railroads, either directly or through one of its employees, might make an offer for the franchise.

The proposition of the promoters is expected to embody merely the charter requirements as to the payment to the city of required percentage of the gross income of the road.

FINANCIER AND ACTRESS TO WED

August Belmont and Elinor Robson Will Marry in Europe This Summer

LONDON, June 19.—It is reported on very excellent authority that the engagement of August Belmont and Elinor Robson is soon to be announced and that the marriage of the actress and the American financier will take place in Europe this summer.

It is impossible at this moment to confirm the report. Miss Robson, who crossed on the liner St. Paul from America, reached Southampton today. The information, however, comes direct from one of the parties concerned.

Will Receive Bids on Stockton Street Line

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—At Monday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors the bid for the franchise of the railroad planned for Stockton street will be received for the franchise necessary to be obtained before the enterprise can be carried forward. It is not expected that any other offer will be received, though there have been rumors that the United Railroads, either directly or through one of its employees, might make an offer for the franchise.

The proposition of the promoters is expected to embody merely the charter requirements as to the payment to the city of required percentage of the gross income of the road.

O'Toole Fights Draw With Ad Wolgast

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—Last night's boxing match between Ad Wolgast and Tommy O'Toole in the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds enabled the Richmond boy to get an even break with Ad Wolgast tonight at the National Athletic Club.

O'Toole started out as if he was going to make short work of his opponent, but Wolgast was on the defensive for the first two rounds and was all over the local lad. O'Toole did not seem to be able to get out of the range of Ad's straight jabs, which were repeatedly put into Tommy's face.

M'CLOUD STRIKE LEADERS IN JAIL

Unable to Raise Bail, Must Remain Prisoners Until September

REDDING, Cal., June 19.—Four Italian strike leaders from McCloud, who are in jail here awaiting trial in the Superior Court for participating in a riot during the recent strike, have been decreed by their countrymen in their hour of need.

Though the aggregate bail required to give them liberty is only $500 cash, no one in McCloud will stand against them and they will have to lie in jail until September, the earliest time at which they can be tried.

Frank Lovett, the fifth leader, bought his liberty with his own money by depositing $200 in cash last week with Justice of the Peace Nichols in McCloud. He has come to San Francisco, hoping that he can find some Italians there who will go bail for the other leaders who are in jail here.

PITCHER OWNS STOCK IN RIVAL CLUB

PITTSBURGH, June 19.—The death of President Doney of the Boston National League Club brings to light the fact that a large stockholder in that club is Lew Morgan, one of the pitchers of the Philadelphia team. Morgan's father, a wealthy coal man, became interested in the Philadelphia team, and at the time Mr. Doney was raising money to organize the Boston team, he subscribed freely and he turned over all stock to his son. This is why Doney has been accused of owning stock in the Boston team, when, as a matter of fact, he does not own a cent's worth.

PEDESTRIAN WESTON IS NOW IN UTAH

OGDEN, June 19.—Edward Weston arrived at Utah, seven miles east of Ogden, at 3:45 p. m. today. He left Morgan, twenty-one miles east of here, at 8:40 o'clock this morning.

Weston was injured last Thursday by a fall and since then has been recuperating. He had intended going southwest from Ogden, over the San Pedro Road, to Los Angeles, but the soldiers of the original route over the Southern Pacific, to San Francisco. The latter road will place at his service, when he leaves Ogden, a rail road vehicle, which will carry his food supply, consisting mainly of fresh milk and eggs.

FREE MEDICINES AND TREATMENT ATTRACT SCORES TO FER DON

The Sick and Suffering Grasp Generous Offer of European Experts. Paralytic Receives Great Benefit—Fruitvale Woman Who Suffered With Tumor Relieved in One Month.

Fer Don's record in Oakland, where he has established permanent offices and San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Jose and in fact all the West, is an unbroken record of deeds well done of restored health to the sick, of freedom of pain to the suffering, of life to the dying.

Not a word of disparagement not a complaint that he has ever broken his word or failed to do everything he promised. Not a single statement that he has ever undertaken a case that he did not cure if curable. And even in incurable cases the report always is that he helped them more than the regular doctors ever had done.

And who are these who vouch for his integrity, his manhood, his power and the skill with which he cures diseases? The obscure, the unknown, the irresponsible? Not one of them. They are the bone and shew of the city. Bankers, lawyers, doctors, business men and stern householders who have known what it is to look death squarely in the face and have seen the patients he has helped and benefited. These are the best vouchers any man can have and Fer Don has them by the score.

Mrs. Michliss was 28½ years old, a native of this city who has suffered untold agonies from paralysis is one of the many thousands who strongly endorse Fer Don's most original methods of overcoming sickness and distress. Mrs. Michliss told a newspaper man in a few simple words of the wonderful improvement in her case and her extreme gratification of the thorough treatment she received at the hands of Fer Don's European Experts. She said: "When I began treatment with Fer Don on April 15 I was in a terrible condition. Paralysis had so attacked my back and arms and limbs that I thought I should go frantic with pain. I suffered so much that I was unable to help myself. I was a drudge and constant care to my family. I was helpless as a new born babe. I could not move a step without crutches and was so sick and despondent that I prayed that I might die."

"Then a good friend of mine placed a copy of an Oakland paper in my hands and I read about the wonderful cures of Fer Don. Then and there I decided I would try and see him and gain some relief from the tortures that seemed harder than I could bear."

"I took treatment from the European Experts and Bloodless Surgeons and I can say they helped me miraculously. I am gaining in flesh and color. I sleep well at nights and the old pains have left my body."

"I can do my housework as good as any woman and the crutches I used for so long are not put away. I hope forever Fer Don's European Experts have performed a real miracle in my case and I can never say enough in praise of them."

Another, most unusual statement was made by Mrs. Albert Holmes of Fruitvale, who came to see the European Experts and Bloodless Surgeons. She said: "I have been suffering from a tumor for some time—tried every known method, saw many doctors as specialists and I was here in the end of 1908. One day I read of the case of Fer Don's European Experts and after talking it over at home I decided to come and see the Bloodless Surgeons. At once my treatment I am completely cured. The tumor has disappeared. I suffered no pain there was no knife and I did not drop a drop of blood in all my life. I consider that my life has been saved by the wonderful methods of Fer Don."

In speaking of these cases Fer Don's representative said: "We are especially glad to have helped these people because first they are prominent and well known people in the community in which they live and secondly because they were so discouraged when they came to us. Experiences of this character thousands in the aggregate permit us to make the free offer we have made for one month's treatment."

"However," continued the representative, "delay is dangerous—the wise one acts and the way is open—bring the attached coupon to the office of the European Medical Experts and Bloodless Surgeons at 1009 Broadway, Oakland, and begin the treatment at once—now. Fer Don's offices here in Oakland are permanent and this most liberal offer includes thirty days free treatment medicines etc. A few days' work under the care of these expert specialists and the cure of sickness and misery may be avoided."

FREE TREATMENT COUPON
This coupon entitles the holder to one month's free treatment with Fer Don's European Experts and Bloodless Surgeons at their offices 1009 Broadway, Oakland, if presented on or before June 30, 1909.

HAWAIIAN STRIKE IS LOCAL AFFAIR

Gov. Frear Says International Developments Are Not to Be Expected

HONOLULU, June 19.—Governor Walter F. Frear, in an official statement regarding the plantation strike said today:

"I see no reason why this strike on the Island of Oahu should assume an international aspect. It is purely an industrial affair and the masses among the strikers have shown every disposition to act in a peaceable and orderly way. The very few cases of violence which have occurred are being dealt with by the civil authorities in the ordinary order."

UNION OIL FLEET IS BEING REPAINTED

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—All the steamers of the Union Oil Company's fleet are being repainted in order to give them a uniform distinguishing color that will enable them to be readily identified in the harbor as well as at sea.

The new coat consists of a black hull with upper edge and all the deck houses and furnishings of deep yellow, except the smokestack which is black with a white letter U on the side. The steamers are the Lansing Argyle, Roma, Whittier, Washenaw, Santa Maria and Santa Rita. The former colors were of black and white and were more attractive than the black and tan that is to be used.

It is expected the remains will be found today. No definite news from the posses on the track of Marques, the supposed murderer, has yet been received.

CENTER FLIRTS WITH NOMINATION

Or, to Be More Truthful, the Nomination Winks at Him and Flees

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—There was a jubilation last week in the sparse ranks of the representatives of the Republican party, who call themselves the Municipal League of Independent Republican Clubs. The cry went up from the headquarters in the Mills building, "The child has found a grandpa." This triumphant shouting was caused by the fact that the reactionaries had at last discovered a man who had agreed to accept the nomination of independent candidate for mayor. The victim was Supervisor George Center, who was born in Scotland, 65 or more years ago, and who has accumulated a large fortune in the Mission district of this city by real estate speculation and by inheritance. He is a very nice old gentleman, but accused by some of being a stubborn and opinionative person. He is a sectional candidate and not over popular in that section, otherwise the Mission; nor are other parts of the city surcharged with delight at his selection.

Against Prizefights

Center has a record as supervisor of having voted "yes" on every unpopular measure and of having recorded his vote as "no" on every popular question coming before the board. He is particularly antagonistic to limited and contests other wise prizefights, believing that they should be continued to the death of one or both of the contestants. The records of the supervisors show that Center has always voted "no" on all prizefight permits. There is a story of political circulation that Gavin McNab, lately nominated Center. The choice of the rump says that McNab advised him to get into the fight three months ago. On the other hand it is said that McNab gave, without even the suggestion of a "his advice to the league to nominate" Center. There is quite a fine distinction between advising Center to take the nomination and urging the Republican rump to nominate him. It is not probable that either the

For the convenience of hundreds of motorists and others desirous of taking one of the most beautiful trips in the State, THE TRIBUNE has compiled a map and arranged an itinerary for a vacation trip from Oakland to Santa Cruz over the picturesque roads of the Santa Cruz Mountains via the Garden Cities of San Jose and Los Gatos.

By reference to the map certain numbers are found in red which are fully explained in the outside columns of reading matter. Auto roads are also in red.

These various hotels, resorts and garages mentioned are considered the best for the accommodation of road travelers, and those seeking rest and recreation for the summer months.

ON THE PLATEAU—Just over a fine auto road from San Francisco, through the mountains to Santa Cruz, or the other resorts along the way, it is necessary to have a car capable of being purchased and repaired in any emergency. The ideal is to have such a car or the renting of an automobile. If such is the case, San Jose is the place to go. The location, 201 to 217 North Market street, San Jose, is one of the largest and best in the foothills, occupying 30,000 square feet of floor space, with a basement of 10,000 feet. It is fireproof and well managed with reception and crossing rooms for customers, and a large waiting room. It is at hand for electric, gas, oil, and acc. batteries. Sundries, gasoline, and oils are fully stocked. Washing machines, refrigerators, and stoves are available. They have a complete auto equipment, and a repair expert mechanic and a repairman. Remond and Rogel are the owners at their REMARKS.—The area, known as "El Cascar," derives its name from a black stone which stands above the center of the path at the point where the main road crosses the ravine. The black stone is a volcanic origin and chemical composition is similar to the black stone of the Deafie sulphates of Sulphur and Magnesium. The acid rain of alkali dust found near the site is due to the dust and from the presence of which it derives its name. Around the base and on the sides of the rock are several springs strongly impregnated with salt and other chemical impurities. One of the springs is situated in a small stone basin just east of the rock. It is labeled "Salt condiment" and is said to be good for the possession of rheumatism and health giving.

There are bat's, springs, falls, terraces, etc. Travellers will all agree that the most beautiful view is of the beauty and the mineral water of the waters.

From the main line and general road to the north, from San Jose, a distance of six miles, Penitencia creek runs through the reservation.

At the park is an excellent cafe of which Mr. Fred Otis is proprietor. It is the only place for refreshments and is an excellent place for a picnic. There is a cooking; service in the kitchen. A good spot for a wedding is the "Lantern" which is a small building of four floors on the veranda.

GOULD WILL SPEND MILLION TO DEFEAT WIFE

COURTSHIP MAY HAVE TO BE REHEARSED

Howard Gould Will Be Last Witness and Recite Entire Married Life

WOMEN WITNESSES WILL ADD SPICE TO THE CASE

Night Sessions May Be Held if the Case Seems to Drag

NEW YORK, June 19.—Inquiry today into the cost of the separation suit of the Howard Goulds, brought from a close friend of the husband the declaration that no less a sum than $1,000,000 was available, if such an amount is needed, to defeat Mrs. Howard Gould's action.

Thousands More

It is impossible to ascertain how much the firm of Nicol, Annabie, Lindsay & Fuller has expended in Howard Gould's behalf, but the amount must run deep into five figures. The defense has been under the direct supervision of Delaney Nicol, one of the most expensive lawyers practicing at the New York bar.

In addition to paying for his own defense, Howard Gould has had to bear much of the expense incurred by Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for his wife. Mr. Shearn has already been allowed a counsel fee of $50,000, which came out of Howard Gould's pocket the time Mrs. Gould was awarded temporary alimony of $15,000. Justice Giefferich now has before him an application for an additional counsel fee of $20,000 for Mr. Shearn and an additional $40,000 for expenses already incurred.

Howard Last Witness
The record in the case is most voluminous. Mr. Nicol has a copy of the previous day's transcript furnished him this morning, and it is estimated that this alone will cost Howard Gould more than $1,000. Mr. Shearn will have a like transcript, if the court allows his claim for expenses.

An attorney for the defense said today that their probable last witness would be Howard Gould. If he is called to the stand, it will be to recite in detail the story of his married life with Mrs. Gould and perhaps even his courtship of her when she was Katherine Clemmons, the actress. It is said his direct examination will occupy an entire court day.

"How long will the cross-examination of Howard Gould probably take?" Attorney Shearn was asked today.

"If he takes the stand," was the answer. "I don't see how I can get through with him under two days."

When Mrs. Gould was on the witness stand in the early days of the case, she permitted Mr. Nicol to question her up to a certain point about alleged travels with "Buffalo Bill" Cody's Wild West show, on the theory that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. This, it is believed, will open up a line of cross-examination that will keep up the Gould trial's record for sensation.

Other Women in Case
Other women are certain to figure in the case if Mr. Gould takes the stand in his own defense. Mrs. Gould, in her testimony, hinted several times that she knew of other women in whom her husband is interested.

So far in the case the names of other women have not come out, although Mr. Shearn has made several attempts.

The Gould suit will continue before Judge Dowling on Monday and will probably last another week. The sessions and may hold night court if the case seems to drag. Mr. Nicol is particularly anxious to hasten the case, as he has to sail for Europe on July 1.

DEBTS MAY BE DEDUCTED FROM CORPORATION STOCK
DES MOINES, June 19.—Judge W. H. McHenry today held that debts may be deducted from the actual value of corporation stock for assessment purposes under the Iowa laws, thus settling a question that has been mooted for years.

LILLIAN TO BUY RACERS
NEW YORK, June 19.—Lillian Russell wandered away from the theatrical district today and boarded the American liner New York on her way to London.

"I am going away for rest and to look at pretty things," said the star, "art objects, museums and the like. I am going to Paris to see the fashion, but, dear me, I am not going to make any purchases abroad. I can get better material cheaper in my own country and can get fitted better."

"But Mr. Hughes' anti-betting law was a good piece of legislation, wasn't it?" she continued. "Instead of betting on a horse, I am going to buy the horse and watch him run. That's the sport. I am keen on some of Gene Lee's horses, and when I am in London I will look some of them over, buy a couple of yearlings and race them in a year or so. There is nothing in betting. There is more interest in racing, and the interest is going to increase year by year."

"When I return I shall star in a new play by Edmund Day. The scene of it is laid in Wall street, and it is called 'Widows' Might.' Be careful; those who have read the play say it is very good, and I think so myself. But I am protecting myself. George Broadhurst is writing another for me, based on Washington's life."

LABOR CONDITIONS COLOMBIA'S CHIEF ARE MADE BY NATIONAL LIFE EXECUTIVE NOT DEPOSED

So Says Samuel Gompers on Eve of His Departure For Europe

Government Administrations Have Little to Do With Progress of Working Masses

NEW YORK, June 19.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, was a passenger on the steamer Baltic, which left today for Liverpool. Gompers is going abroad to attend the International Trade Union Congress at Paris and the British Trade Union Congress at Ipswich.

During his absence abroad he will visit various countries in Europe, studying labor conditions.

Government's Influence Nil
"Have you noticed any work on the part of the national administration of the government which may indicate that labor will fare better under this administration than under the preceding one?"

"Oh, administrations have little to do with the progress of labor," was the answer. "It is not they that make the progress; it is the broad conditions of national life that do so. So far as administrations are concerned the progress of labor is like the shining of the sun. By that I mean that administrations might as well try to regulate the shining of the sun as to regulate the progress of labor."

HARRIMAN'S NEPHEW SITS IN POLICE COURT PEN

Young Millionaire Finds Himself Penniless When Arrested For Scorching

Is Herded With Petty Criminals While Chauffeur Hunts For Bail

NEW YORK, June 19.—Herbert M. Harriman, a nephew of Edward H. Harriman, spent an unpleasant two hours in the Flushing Police Court this morning, when he was compelled to sit in the pen with a riffraff of felons and miscreants, while his chauffeur went out and scoured around for his bail.

Mr. Harriman was held up in Flushing for speeding his automobile at the rate of 27 miles an hour. The prisoner admitted that he was driving at a 15-mile an hour gait.

He was held in $100 bail for special sessions. He didn't have the money with him and started to get it, when the magistrate called to a policeman to stop him. The prisoner stormed and threatened that he would have someone broke for this. The court smiled behind his hand and the court attendants turned their heads away and guffawed.

Finally his chauffeur returned with the necessary bail. With his nose high in the air and his eyes darting lightning bolts of hate and anger from side to side, just the ticket.

Mr. Harriman strode out of court.

NATIONAL TURNFEST OPENS AT CINCINNATI
CINCINNATI, June 19.—That promises to be the most successful turnfest ever held by the North American Turnbund began in this city today and will continue for ten days. More than 3000 turners will take part, coming from all parts of the United States, and several are from Germany. The turners will be housed at the Carthage Fair Grounds.

ders, he reflected, is orders. But the McCulloch draws 17 feet 10 inches, and the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers are from 7 to 8 feet in depth at this season.

A pretty task, thought the captiva. He telegraphed the glad but certain fact that the McCulloch could proceed as far as Mare Island, but that any further proceedings would have to be legal.

The cause of the extraordinary order exists in the swarm of little boats on the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, which are without the lights and bells and whistles required by law. Collector Stratton informed the Treasury Department that he was powerless to prevent open and persistent law-breaking because he lacked a proper boat.

The Washington officials then decided that the McCulloch must cruise up the rivers and overtake the little, lawless boats. The six guns she carries would be just the ticket.

Shipping circles say that if the McCulloch goes to Sacramento and Stockton she will overawe the inhabitants, who will certainly think her an apparition.

The Owner Collapses When Chase Downhill Ends in Crash Against Tree

A breathless pursuit of a runaway automobile, punctuated by screams of varying degrees of anguish, the sudden stoppage of the car, which crashed into a tree, and the owner's collapse, were exciting incidents of a trip in her new car taken by Mrs. E. Z. Hinkle, a wealthy widow living at 1505 Franklin street, yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Hinkle left home shortly after 3 o'clock on a round of "calls" and the new machine merrily up the Linda Vista drive, and pausing at the top, threw on the brakes and alighted. Turning to close the door of the car she was horrified to see the apparently amiable automobile backing away, gaining impetus as it ran. It suddenly gave vent to a series of mysterious and terrifying whirs and chugs, and before her horrified eyes made straight for the edge of the road, which cuts off a considerable decline.

Mrs. Hinkle, according to eye wit-

RUZ FORTUNE STRANGELY MISSING

Jewelry, Gowns, Automobile and All Shipped Away After Her Suicide

ENGLISH OFFICIALS MAY DEMAND INVESTIGATION

Evading of Death Duties Law May Result in Unravelling Mystery

LONDON, June 19.—A search of the records of Somerset house, where all wills made in England are filed, has failed to find the will of Mrs. Mary Agnes Ruiz, who committed suicide on May 16 in her splendid mansion in Grosvenor street, leaving jewelry, gowns, plate, linen, etc., matching her position in life. The new mystery in this extraordinary case is what became of the Ruiz property.

Mrs. Ruiz owned horses, an electric brougham, a powerful automobile, jewelry, gowns, etc., of an approximate value of $200,000. All of them disappeared on the day of the funeral. It has been ascertained that they were shipped to Paris, but the name of the consignee cannot be learned. Whether she is the mysterious C. R. Williamson, who managed to throw the veil of secrecy over all the proceedings from engaging Mrs. Ruiz's house to paying her funeral bills, nobody seems to know.

Officials Are Anxious
As Mrs. Ruiz died within English jurisdiction something may be heard officially about the sudden and mysterious disappearance of her effects.

English officials are interested because they will want to know how the country without their collecting death duties, which nobody in England ordinarily escapes. All of Mrs. Ruiz's household bills were paid promptly, so the tradesmen in the neighborhood are satisfied. The only bill unpaid is the gas bill, which a reporter saw lying unopened on the hall table.

May Unravel Mystery
As the English officials know that Mrs. Ruiz died leaving an estate well within the limitations of the death duties law there may be an official inquiry seeking to unravel the mystery of the disappearance of the suicide's fortune immediately after the tragedy.

The reporters' search of the records in Somerset house has failed to disclose any of O'Brien, Hutton or Ruiz. The correspondent learns that the mysterious Williamson has stated that he is willing to disclose his information to any authenticated member of the suicide's family.

QUINN REPUBLICAN CLUB HAS MEETING
The James G. Among the prominent speakers of the evening were Councilman Stachler, Attorney J. J. Long and M. Brennan.

FIFTH ARREST MADE IN RECENT MAIL ROBBERY
OMAHA, June 19.—Advices have been received here of the arrest at Eubank, Mo., of a man wanted for a robbery with the Union Pacific robbery near here on May 22. The arrest was made as the result of alleged clues obtained from Lillian Stephenson, the woman brought here from Denver with Shelton. Marvin is now in prison at Twin Falls, awaiting action by the Federal authorities here.

The owner collapsed, down town garage and after an hour's patient waiting Mrs. Hinkle was enabled to again return to her home. The damage to the car amounts to about $10.

POWERFUL CORPORATIONS SHALL BEAR THE BURDEN

Small Concerns With Net Profits of $5000 or Less, to Be Exempt

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The senate finance committee adjourned tonight at 9 o'clock after a session lasting three hours it agreed that should the Aldrich substitute taxing an income tax on corporations succeed in passing, only the big and powerful institutions shall be assessed. Small concerns having a net income of $5000 or less are to be immune. Nor shall monies or net revenues be tendered for payment on the interest of bonds be amenable to the law. In other words, Senator Aldrich proposes that only the rich and prosperous institutions shall come within the purview of his amendment.

Senator Penrose, parliamentarily in charge of the bill, will ask for a duty on crude oil of 25 per cent, but on the refined product, by agreement with Aldrich, there is to be no tax. The committee took up lumber, but came to no conclusion. Steel rails were also passed upon, but what decision was arrived at cannot be learned.

Income Tax Revision
Senator Aldrich was in the hope of receiving from Attorney General Wickham a revised bill on the corporation income tax, but was disappointed. On yesterday the senator from Rhode Island promised the senate that he would present his substitute today. As the bill originally came from the White House to the finance committee, it was wholly unsatisfactory. Its present phraseology was offensive, too it is said, and its legal ends were loosely drawn.

Senator Aldrich, as he suggested to his committee this afternoon, is willing to abandon the 2 per cent plan and is prepared to fix the income on corporation net receipts at something like 1 1/2 per cent. At 2 per cent the revenues would amount to $100,000,000, he thinks.

But with the tariff bill, as he plans and hopes to succeed with it, he will need less than $100,000,000 outside customs receipts to meet the necessary burdens of the government.

Small Schedules
Late this afternoon Aldrich submitted many small schedules lowering duties on articles heretofore passed upon. These refer to steel bands, steel tubes and the like. In answer to a question from Senator Egan, he admitted that he was amending certain items in order to give view of lowering the duties so that the popular cry for a revision downward might be met.

When the new chapter of the senate presented its amendments to the tariff on the senate this morning at 10 o'clock the chamber was absolutely empty. After ten minutes he succeeded in inducing Stone and Burton to come inside and hear him.

Consents to Postponement
Senator Bailey, speaking for himself and most of the Democratic and Republican income tax advocates, announced at the opening session that he would consent to postpone the disposal of the income tax question until after the tariff schedules were disposed of.

It became apparent at once that the postponement would be made, but there were needless, some debate before a definite conclusion was reached.

After debate had proceeded for half an hour, a resolution postponing the subject was submitted by Bailey and agreed to. The formal presentation of the matter was made by Aldrich and took the form of a unanimous resolution to defer the entire income tax and corporation tax questions until the schedules are out of the way.

At last time for the amendment for an income tax and the committee's substitute for it will be taken up and kept before the senate until they have been disposed of.

"Revenue by Subterfuge"
Bailey again sought assurance that no motion would be taken to delay the amendment to the committee, but was met with a prompt response from Senator Egan, who declared that he would not agree to such a proposition. He burned added that he was opposed to any income or corporation tax, or to any other subterfuge as a means of paying the expenses of the government.

Borah suggested to Aldrich that the finance committee should not delay in bringing in its plan for a corporation tax as considerable time would be required to dispose of it.

"I may as well say now, as any time," replied the New Hampshire Senator, "that the committee has requested the attorney general to prepare an amendment and under the direction of the President he will do so, giving us, no doubt, a publication largely reflecting the views of the administration. As soon as it is considered by the committee it will be reported to the senate and I hope the senate will not be late next Monday morning."

The amendment was then allowed to go over. The finance committee's amendment to the "hidden paragraph" saw the light in the senate today for the first time, being presented there by Chairman Aldrich.

MOTHER FAR OUT AT SEA HEARS OF BABE
IN BERKELEY HOME

From the deck of a steamer in the darkness, 700 miles from land, to the cradle of a child in an East Berkeley home is a long reach, but it was spanned almost in a twinkling Friday night, when Mrs. Peter Johnson, a passenger in the steamer Lurline, inquired by wireless as to the welfare of her babies in their Berkeley home. Four minutes after the operator on the Lurline had flashed that message to a land station he had not only received an answer from the Johnson home, where the Johnson baby was at the time crying for its mother, but had acknowledged the message to the wireless operator on land.

It was late at night when the anxious message came from far seaward and was caught by Charles Hammond, the wireless operator out here, Foist Lobos. He telephoned to the Johnson home, immediately got a reply to the effect that the baby was kicking up a great fuss and flushed the news out beyond the horizon, where the Lurline was plunging into dark and turbulent seas. Back came an O. K. from the ship's operator. The whole business had been accomplished in four minutes by the watch, but it didn't seem to impress the Johnson baby, which continued to cry with the rest of the household.

ALAMEDA IS MUCH IN NEED OF ONE, HE SAYS

Thinks the City Council Will Appropriate the Necessary Funds

ALAMEDA, June 19.—That the city of Alameda will have a new electric light plant within the next year was expressed by Electric Light Commissioner Charles Adams today. Adams succeeded W. Gorman, president of the commission, and since his appointment has been taking a keen interest in the work of the commission.

"I have been inspecting the electric light plant at least three times a week and sometimes four," said Commissioner Adams. "The plant certainly needs a new building for its plant. The machinery is crowded into a very small space and the employees have hardly room enough to move around in. The lot on which the present plant stands is largely undisturbed by the industry installed in the present building."

Adams stated that the commissioners thought it likely that the city council would appropriate the funds for the erection of the new plant.

In competition with veterans of a score or more track and road contests, Fred Wiseman of San Francisco Friday secured fourth place in the races for the Indiana trophy. This race was run over the Crown Point Course, about fifty miles from Chicago, and was witnessed by about 100,000 people. The race was won by Matson in a Chalmers Detroit car in 4:31:22, with Robertson in a Locomobile second in 4:39:03, and Matson in a Marlin third in 4:42:03. The distance was 232.74 miles and this speed gave the winner an average of a fraction over fifty miles per hour.

The course was 23.25 miles to the lap and the fastest time for a single circuit was recorded by Burman in the Buick, who drove the distance in 23:41. Burman had trouble in the second lap, however, and was forced to retire from the contest. Robertson, who secured second place, was the winner of the Vanderbilt race last fall. The winner, M. Matson, is a new driver, as were most of the others who were still in when the race was called.

That there will be no lack of entries for the big road race that is scheduled for the 9th day of September in Alameda county is evidenced by the fact that J. B. Watson, who is chairman of the committee handling the details, has been deluged with requests for information during the past week. Already there are a number of men who are getting cars for the event. The biggest of these is the new Benz that is coming for Percy Walker of this city. This is a duplicate of the machine that took second place in the Grand Prix race at Savannah last fall, and if this car is entered with a competent operator it should have little difficulty in capturing first place. Another fast machine that will be here is the new 60 Stoddard Dayton that has been ordered by J. W. Leavitt of San Francisco. It is said to estimate that between twenty and thirty speed burners will be ready and on the course when the time comes to start.

According to information recently received by D. A. Bouney, the Hupmobile was the only car costing less than $1000 to secure a perfect score in the recent four day endurance run held by the Detroit Dealers' Association. This little car is attracting a great deal of attention in Oakland and a number of them will be on the streets as soon as they can be delivered by the factory. One of these little machines will be entered in the races of the Reliance Club at Emeryville on the 5th of July.

As an introduction to the Elks Carnival at Los Angeles in July will come the road race of the Southern California Dealers' Association, which will be held over the Santa Monica course on Saturday, July 22. Two events are scheduled, one for light cars and the other for the big racing monsters, with a speed of better than 100 miles per hour. In the heavy car event, which will be witnessed by all, to start, and all of these have been entered. This will be the biggest contest held in the West up to this time. The distance of each race will be 200 miles.

During the past week a new agency has been established in Oakland. It is a branch of Curtis Lee's San Francisco house and from this branch Packard and Cadillac cars will be delivered. According to a statement made by M. E. Silva, the manager of the Oakland store, it will be impossible to get any more 1909 model Packards, but the new 1910 will be ready for delivery in a few days. He is also authorized for the statement that 400 Cadillac have been sold and delivered in California this year. The output of this factory will be over 9000 machines this season.

Pending the securing of a permanent location Mr. Silva will be quartered at the White garage on Telegraph avenue.

Manager Rayl of the San Francisco house of Lozier announces the arrival of the 1910 model. Three of these have been delivered and one of them is in Alameda county. It is the property of Ed Dodge of Alameda. The Lozier is built for the people who want the best regardless of the original cost.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hammond Hays have just returned from a six hundred mile trip through Shasta county in their six cylinder Oldsmobile, and from Mr. Hays' report this must be one of the most beautiful tours in the State. They left San Francisco on Friday last and drove to Redding via Winters. Speaking of the roads from Winters to Redding, Mr. Hays states that they are positively the best in the State, but on the east side they are not so good. From Redding to Montgomery Creek the scenery is unsurpassed in the State, but the roads are in bad condition, being rough and full of pebbles. After the foothills are passed, however, and the mountains are reached the roads are better. In going from Redding to Montgomery Creek the Oak Run road should be taken, thereby avoiding the fording of the creek, which is necessary on the other road. From first five miles out of Reno, which likewise has a few sandy spots. Plumas Junction is also a stopping place, the latter twenty-five miles from Reno. Millford is 65 miles from Reno and Janesville 80 miles.

Susanville to Greenville is a route sometimes taken, as it furnishes a short cut, but the road is not as yet open. The grade is exceedingly heavy and exceptionally poor for automobiles, as there are no stopping places en route.

Susanville to Prattville, Taylorville, Crescent Mills and Quincy, via Mountain Meadows and Big Meadows. The road will be in good shape in thirty days. It is never open during the winter months, but during the other seasons of the year this road provides a beautiful trip through the famous fishing grounds at Big Meadows, Clear Creek and Mountain Meadows. All of these places are excellent stopping places and gasoline may be had at any of them.

C. E. Mathewson is in receipt of advice from his factory today that the Shawmut car in the New York-Seattle transcontinental race which is equipped with Diamond tires, has experienced no trouble with tires whatever up to date, the car having already covered one half the distance it is to run.

Entries for the Glidden tour contests at the regular fee of $200, close June 15, with Chairman F. B. Hower, 760 Main street, Buffalo. After that day and until July 1 the entry fee will be $300. The condition of the lists at the end of last week was eminently satisfactory, in fact it has been so from the start. On July 1 of last year when the tour started on July 1, there were only twenty-nine entries in hand and this year there were more than that many paid in before June 1. While entries will probably arrive in every mail during the last few days, it is not unlikely that quite a few makers will delay deliberately and pay the added fee. This is because they are now too busy to plan for contests a month ahead. The success of the tour has been assured for a month or more and there is a good field of contestants for both the Glidden and Hower trophies, but the new trophy, the handsome cup presented by the city of Detroit for the car with a minimum tonnage that makes the balance as yet at the mercy of a single entry. This trophy is much finer than was at first projected and the prestige of it will nearly equal that of the Glidden trophy, as the sole difference of conditions for winning is in whatever difference lies between a full touring body and the slightly smaller body known as a "miniature tonneau." With a small field entered for this trophy every car will have a fine chance, so that the competition for the Detroit trophy, with only one entry, is just now the most inviting feature of the tour.

"Women autoists, that is, those who drive their own cars, are exceedingly scarce through the Eastern states in comparison to the number of women owners who manipulate the wheels themselves in the West," says Miss May Wilson, one of the most enthusiastic autoists in this state, and one of the most popular society belles of this city and Vallejo.

Already this year Miss Wilson has driven her Studebaker many thousand miles over all kinds of roads and has succeeded in establishing what automobile enthusiasts consider an enviable record. Before the pleasant weather had set in Miss Wilson had scored many hundreds of miles over the roads in the north-of-the-bay counties, and since pleasant weather began and the roads commenced to assume an inviting appearance Miss Wilson has been in many instances the first to be welcomed in her

"THIS IS THE GOOD CONSTRUCTION CAR"
Any automobile that is trying to get a reputation on any other foundation than that of thorough mechanical construction will not stand the test of time.

For the money, the best as good as the Cadillac Thirty is not made. This is not an assertion. It is a fact and you know what facts are. You will not be satisfied until you have investigated—then you'll know why you want a Cadillac Thirty.

The Cadillac Thirty is not an assembled proposition and it is not a new proposition. It is made in its entirety, down to the bolts and screws, under one roof, which covers one of the most scientific automobile plants in the world, and which has produced more automobiles than any other factory in existence.

We would be making a serious mistake to make these statements if your inspection and trial of the car did not bear out all we say about it.

Durocar Durability

Has Been Demonstrated Day After Day Throughout Southern California

In every recognized automobile event which has taken place in the south in the last two years this car was either a winner or amongst the leaders. More than once it has defeated cars twice its price.

There can be only one solution for this oft-repeated success, and that solution is this: We combine DURABILITY with SPEED, giving the owner a car which can be subjected to the roughest kinds of roads for a longer period and with less trouble than any other car at even a far higher price, and one which will develop a speed of from forty-five to fifty miles an hour—surely fast enough for the average man.

AGED MAN SUES FOR SUPPORT

Claims His Children Refuse To Give Him Enough To Live On.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—Abraham Haas more than 80 years of age began suit for maintenance yesterday against Samuel A. Haas, Eugene Haas, Milton Haas, Juliet Haas, Joseph and Josephine Haas, his children who he alleges have refused to furnish him with funds for his support although he has turned over to them in years past his earnings as president of the Pacific Bond & Fertilizer Company. He charges that his children received an income from two insurance policies for $500 which are paid up. He also alleges that April 14th he was deposed as president of the fertilizer company because he refused to abandon a civil suit brought by him against that concern and that the deciding vote which caused his dismissal from the company was cast by his son Samuel Haas. This suit is still pending. According to the complaint Haas was twice married both wives being dead. His second wife Mrs. Ellen Haas died September 18th last and he claims her funeral expenses left him destitute.

In conclusion the aged man declares that he "is poor, destitute, sick and feeble, broken in health and unable to make a living for himself. He asks that he be allowed $150 a month for his support."

GAME FRENCHMAN WINS COBE RACE

First Two Cars Separated By One Minute in Long Contest

CROWN POINT, Ind., June 19.—After a bruising and nerve racking contest and the most spectacular in the history of auto road racing in the United States, Louis Chevrolet, the "Demon Frenchman," driving a Buick car, won the Cobe trophy race over the Crown Point-Lowell course today by the narrow margin of one minute and five seconds.

A fellow countryman from Pau was his closest competitor. He was William Bourque, driving a Knox car.

Fully 50,000 people witnessed the grueling contest. So intense was their interest in the races today that men and women alike succumbed to the heat hours under a hot sun. Men and women alike, succumbed to the heat and were carried in semi-conscious conditions into the temporary hospitals at different points on the course.

Drivers and their assistants in the race suffered from heat and dust. The seven hundred members of the First Infantry, Illinois National Guard, on duty at the speedway were also sufferers.

The victory of the Frenchman Chevrolet was a most wonderful exhibition of stam, of nerve and of resourcefulness under the most trying conditions.

His car was not the best in the race by any means. He had trouble more than once with the engine. He made lap after lap with the cylinders working. And yet he never faltered. He won the race on his nerve.

The race was run over a road that was in a terrible condition. There were patches in the course that were hardly in shape to travel and yet the dozen drivers who faced the starter willingly took their lives in their hands and sent their cars tearing around the course at a mile a minute speed, turning sharp corners and plunging up the rough places with never a thought of danger.

Luckily no one was injured. Narrow escapes were numerous. Once a skidding racing machine struck a flagman. The latter, William Mueller, suffered the fracture of a collar bone.

The interest in the great race, while intense all through the long hours of the day, grew to a white heat as the hair line finish that was to separate the two unseasoned Frenchmen struggling for victory, for glory and incidentally for money, began to grow apparent. Bourque who had been started second in the race, had never been actually headed. But one after another of the racing steeds had crept up close to him and some had bettered the time that he had made.

Chevrolet had started tenth. He started by making a fast lap that put him in the lead and he held this advantage up to the tenth lap when he had troubles with tires and engines and lost the lead to Robertson in the Locomobile.

He regained it again only to lose his place at the head of the flying procession a second time. Again in the sixteenth lap he was in front and he remained there to the finish.

The Locomobile with Robertson again at the wheel captured third place, with Eddie "Hearns" and the foreign Flat fourth and Englebeck in the Standard. Dayton fifth. Chevrolet occupied eighth place, one minute thirty-nine seconds to travel 395.65 miles an average of 49.4 miles an hour. The Knox took one minute and five seconds longer, while the Locomobile needed 13 minutes more than Chevrolet to hurdle the ruts of the roughest road autos ever were required to race over.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

Studebaker at many of the popular resorts.

Miss Wilson's observations on the number of women motorists in the West who do their own driving are the results of her visit in the East last summer.

"I am such an enthusiast myself on motoring that I suppose my statements may seem at first slightly exaggerated, but, nevertheless I am correct and all Eastern automobile men will bear me out in this. The women of the West like to take a hand in the 'game' to a more marked degree than their sisters in the Eastern states. This is especially true of the California girl, whose natural love for an out-door life and sports is particularly appended to when she is seated at the wheel of her own motor car. Thus she becomes as sensitive to the throbbing of the engine of her automobile as an expert engineer."

Miss Wilson does considerable entertaining for her many friends and her automobile plays an important part. Her latest run, one which her guests declare was the most enjoyable of this season, was from this city to Lake Tahoe last Wednesday. Miss Wilson and her guests on their return stated the roads to that point were in the finest shape they have ever been, Miss Wilson herself declaring them to be "boulevards." The scenic beauty of the route Miss Wilson said, is equally as inspiring as that along the banks of the American river—the other side of Sacramento on the road to Lake Tahoe.

During the past few months Pullman Automobiles have been delivered by the Frank O. Renstrom Company of San Francisco to the following Chas. Holman, C. Towne August Waldeneyer, Dr. Powell, Dr. Perry of Stockton, Mr. H. A. Reid of Santa Rosa, K. Winter, C. W. Wolfe, Geo. W. Ellery, Edward A. James, Dr. Herbert, W. Allen, Robert Christie, Robert R. Russ and James Patterson of San Francisco. A number of other deliveries will be made shortly.

Harvey P. Dana of San Jose expects to start for Seattle Saturday in his Chalmers-Detroit 40. Although his car has been driven 8000 miles it is still in such good condition that it needs no adjustment or preparation whatever for the long trip.

The Pioneer Automobile Company are in receipt of a telegram from Mr. Sherman, chauffeur for Hugo A. Tausig dated Salt Lake City, June 13th in which he states that they have traveled twelve hundred and eighty miles, eight hundred of which was over desert that the car is behaving perfectly and that the entire party are having a good time.

Jimmie Ryall, the well known wealthy New York sportsman, has suddenly won fame as a great racing driver of automobiles, by entering and driving his Buick car on Saturday, June 13th, in the Dead Horse Hill Climb at Worcester, Mass., winning four first and defeating many well known racing drivers and cars.

The Dead Horse Hill is one of the real hill climbs of the season, being one of the most strenuous of such events held in the country and the results attained by Ryall are all the more remarkable because of the fact that he had never sat at a wheel of a Buick car until two days before the event.

MONTIE ATTELL PROVES RIGHT TO CHAMPIONSHIP

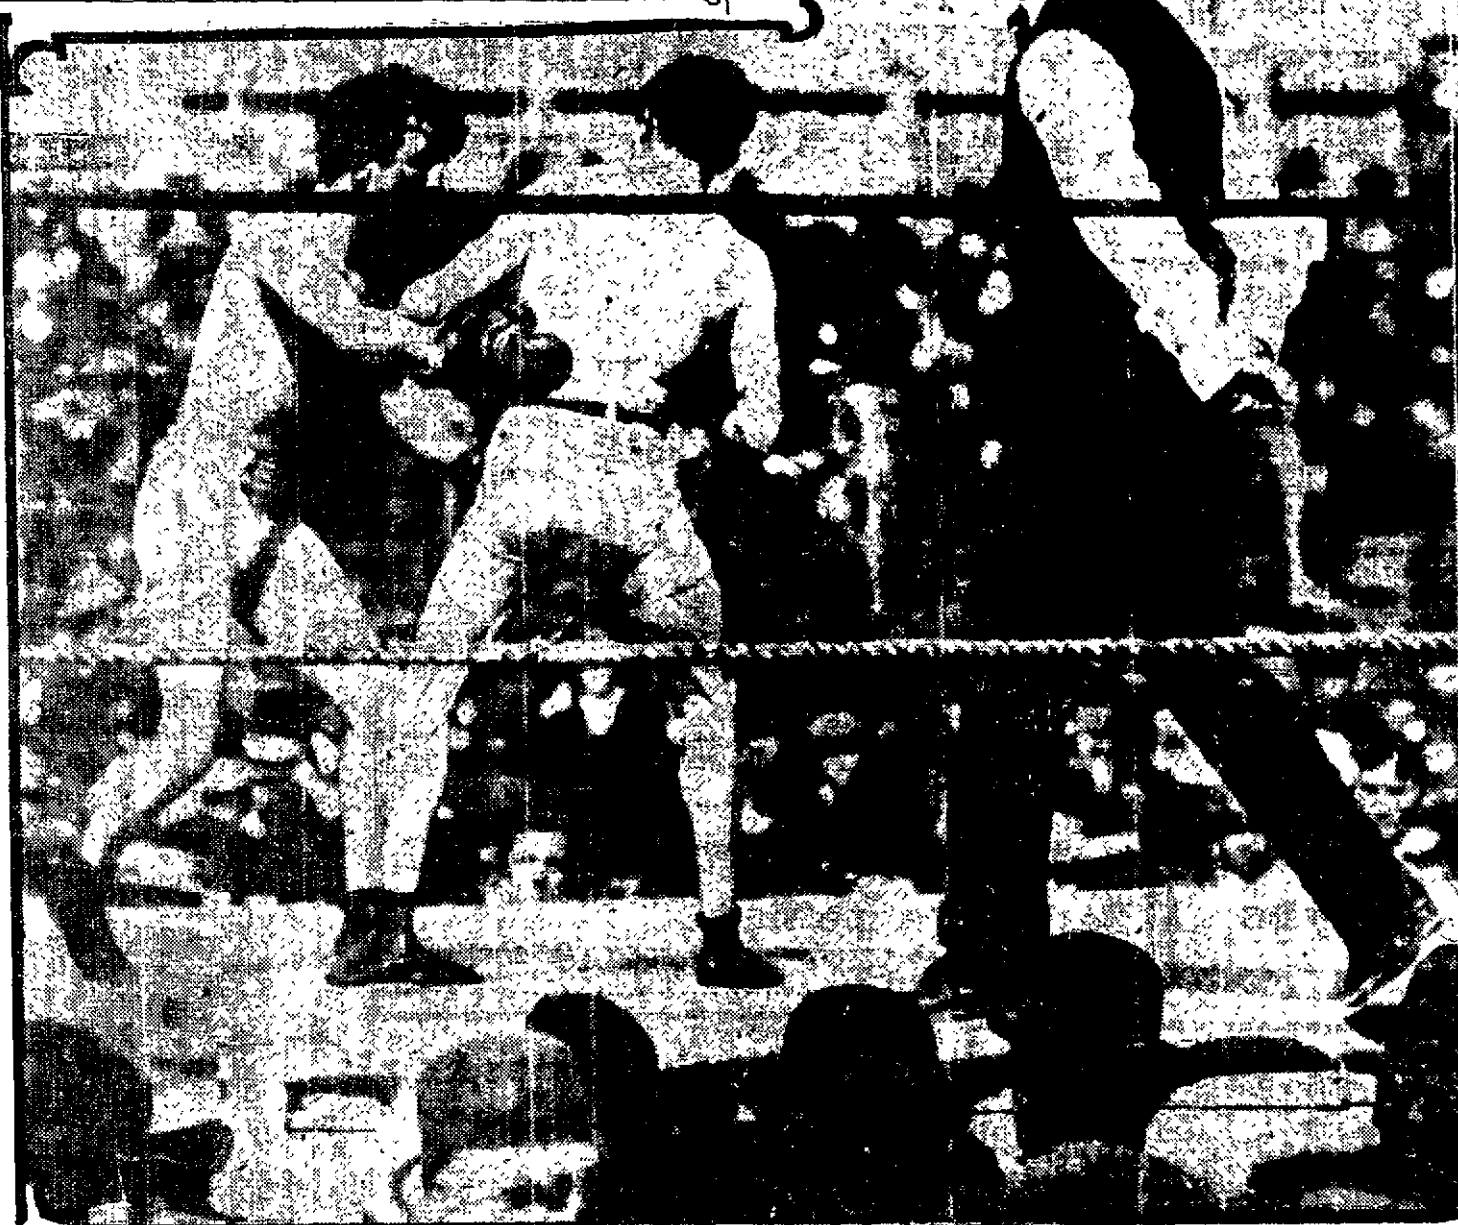

FRANKIE NEIL LOSES HARD FOUGHT BATTLE TO ATTELL

Clever Little Champion Systematically Wears Opponent Down With Clean Punches; Green Draw With Kranz

By EDDIE SMITH.

NO fighting son of Kentucky ever fought more gamely to uphold the honor of his family than Frankie Neil did yesterday to uphold that of the Neils in his contest with Monte Attell. The family feud between these two had arisen through jealousy over the fighting ability of the young members. Frankie Neil had been held up as a better fighter than the best of the Attell family, Abe, and his subsequent defeat at the hands of the clever Hebrew was a hard pill for the Neils, father and son, to swallow.

The Camera Man Catches Frankie Neil in a Frantic Effort to Catch Hold of Monte Attell Just Prior to His Being Put Down for the Last Time. Neil at This Time Was Very Weak and He Tried Hard to Catch Hold of His Opponent in a Game Effort to Stall off the Knock Out.

FRANKIE NEIL TAKES TERRIFIC BEATING FROM CLEVER BANTAM-WEIGHT CHAMPION

Monte Attell Wins in Every Round With Neil

Frankie Not the Fighter He Was in the Olden Days and the Punching Showed Its Effect Early

By W. W. NAUGHTON

UNHEEDING as he was before and fought down inch by inch, game Frankie Neil was finally knocked out by Monte Attell in the eighteenth round, the blow which stretched him on the floor being a full left swing, which caught him on the point of the chin.

At the time the deciding blow was administered Neil was utterly at the mercy of his opponent, and his seconds did not wait for the official count to be completed. They jumped into the ring and gathered up Neil in their arms. Referee Billy Roche pointed at Attell and bawled, "You win," and the victor became privileged to sign himself bantam champion of the world.

Neil took a terrific mauling without flinching, and it wasn't until the fifteenth round that the end was foretold. Even then there were doubts as to Frankie's real condition, for before that he had feigned distress and had reeled around with a grin on his blood-stained face.

Tired in Fifteenth

In the fifteenth round he was palpably tired and he tottered and went to the floor from a left in the stomach that would not have upset him had his strength been intact. Twice after that in the same round he stumbled to his hands and knees in the clinches. When the bell sounded Attell was cutting him left and right, and it looked as though the fight would be won in the following round.

While Neil was too weak to maintain a proper defense, Attell's strength was waning, and though Monte landed at will he could not drop Neil in either the sixteenth or seventeenth rounds.

Neil came out of his corner at the start of the eighteenth round with a steady gait. Attell met him with a half left swing in the stomach and followed up with other smashes of the same description.

"Take a Chance"

"Take a chance, take a chance," roared Neil's seconds, and Frankie went close and tried to exchange blows. Attell beat him back, but once again Neil braced himself and rushed his opponent. They slugged in Attell's corner and Neil tottered back after a volley of lefts and rights had evidently dazed him. As he was going away Attell stepped, after him and swung the left. It was a forceful smash and it finished the fight.

It was a battle in which the tide of success seemed to ebb and flow. Neil placed reliance on his favorite punch, a left rip for the body, and he scored with it frequently. Very often he waited until the last quarter minute of the round, taking strength from a pep talk with his seconds, and then he would rush in with a steady gait. Attell met him with a half left swing in the stomach and followed up with other smashes of the same description.

Attell Recuparates Quickly

After the twelfth round had passed, Neil seemed to decide that he could do better execution with a high left aimed at the face. He countered Attell with this repeatedly and clattered the hopes of his seconds, who egged him on with shouts of approval. Attell, though he tired perceptibly at intervals, seemed to recuperate quickly, and with the exception of the fourteenth round, he had a commanding lead in every three minute spell of battling. At that, Neil's periodic spurts kept the crowd guessing and there was doubt as to which way the thing would go until the fifteenth round. When the moment of the ring shortly before 2 o'clock Attell was the favorite in the betting with odds of ten to nine. From the way the fight opened it looked as though it would be long drawn out.

Neil's Mouth Bleeds

They warmed up a little better in the second round, Neil's left rip being very much in evidence, while Monte used straight lefts and right hooks and body punches. Attell's left eye also showed the effects of an uppercut that he received while fighting close.

In the third round Attell established a strong lead. He punched solidly with the right whenever Neil rushed, and pretty soon Neil's face was covered with blood. Frankie appeared to be tired at the close of the round.

The fourth round was Attell's, his lefts and rights reaching the face with menacing regularity. Frankie kept swinging the left into the stomach and they varied the milling by scuffling matches while hanging to each other and upbraiding in a jerky way with both hands.

It became apparent by this time that Attell intended to make a left hand fight of it entirely. His right hand might have been broken for all the use he made of it. It was also noticeable that he made no effort to step out of range of Attell's slugging factors. He had his mind made up, apparently to take everything that came his way and win out with those tearing body punches.

The seventh round was a particularly spiteful one. Neil, as usual, stood and plunged regularly. Frankie kept swinging the left into the stomach and then went after Monte, swinging for the body. As Monte edged out of a corner he had been piled into Neil's chest and said, "Are you getting tired, Monte?" "No," answered Monte, "I'm just after one of Frankie's corners."

Attell Chews Gum

Frankie indulged in conversational flutters again in the eighth round. He began his rubbing when the bell sounded and he reached the ribs with that left underhand he would murmur, "Does it hurt?" Monte chewed gum and held his hands up. Frankie kept swinging the left into the stomach and then went after Monte, swinging for the body. As Monte edged out of a corner he had been piled into Neil's chest and said, "Are you getting tired, Monte?" "No," answered Monte, "I'm just after one of Frankie's corners."

Gameness of Neil Worthy of Much Praise

batted him, while Monte was wedged in his own angle of the ring. For several rounds after that the boys fought more slowly, the pace having taken the snap out of them. Attell, who was always busy, kept poking at the face with both gloves and Frankie rushed in the latter part of each round.

Neil Slips to His Knees

Neil slipped to his knees while hustling after Attell in the twelfth round and Monte appeared to be both leg and arm weary. Frankie had little difficulty in getting away from Monte's right crosses in this particular spasm of fighting, but in the next round Attell was himself again and Neil was buffeted to add to scores the ring.

Attell made more use of body punches at this juncture and repeatedly bucked Neil's ribs with a slight under the heart. Frankie was persistent as ever, though, and his seconds brightened up when they saw him hold his own with Attell in a force rally, during which both lads used the left hook for the face.

Turning Point in Fight

The fourteenth round saw the last of Neil's waspish spells of fighting. He used the highest left hook again in this round and probably had a shade the better of the exchanges. Then came the fifteenth round and the turning point in the fight.

Attell will no doubt stand better with the patrons of the game after yesterday's showing. He is a lad who has had an uphill struggle for recognition, but his performance with Neil proves him to be at least the equal of any one hundred and sixteen pound man the world around.

Neil, beyond argument, has retrograded. He put up a grand fight, a willing fight, but he is not by any means the Frankie Neil of a few years ago.

Lively Events at Star Of the Sea Parish

The first and second relay teams of the Olympic Club ran a splendid race at the Star of the Sea parish picnic at Shell Mound Park yesterday afternoon.

Another interesting race was the one-mile handicap. Stewart of St. Mary's, with a twenty-five yard handicap, held the lead up to the fifth lap, when he was passed by Hubert. Hubert established a big lead, leaving Stewart and Parsons of Star of the Sea parish to fight for second place. With a yard or two between them Stewart and Parsons struggled through the last lap and when ten yards from the tape Parsons, by a supreme effort, strained himself into second place. The 250-yard handicap was characterized by an equally sensational finish.

Joe Gans Denies That He Is a Consumptive

BALTIMORE, June 18.—In an interview today Joe Gans, former lightweight champion, said: "There is no truth in the story that I have consumption. My health is fine and I am sure my appearance is evidence of it."

For the past year and a half rumors have been sent abroad every so often that Gans has become a victim of the white plague until the general impression has got abroad that the report is true. The foundation for the original report that the former champion was declining in health dates back five years ago, when Gans was unable to make 135 pounds. Since that time he has been wasting away a little year by year, so that at the time of his last fight with Battling Nelson his weight was exactly 128½ pounds. So strong were the indications that the statement seemed true that even Gans' own wife feared a weakness in his lungs, and in letters to her friends has often written of her apprehensions. Doctors, however, both on this coast and on the other side of the Mississippi have made a careful diagnosis of the black physical condition, and so far have been unable to detect either any germs or any underlining of the lungs. The answer offered for the loss in weight is that the seven years that Gans has spent in the ring and in training has sapped all of his vitality, so that now at his comparatively young age he is declining in bodily vigor in the same proportion as a man in the sixties and seventies. His energy and recuperative powers have been vitiated to that extent.

Motorcyclists to Hold Races at Tanforan

The San Francisco and Oakland motorcyclists will hold their semi-official club run to Tanforan to take in the motor cycle races which are to be held at the Eagles' picnic. A large entry list has been taken and a very interesting afternoon's races will be held. Eight events will be run on machines from the smallest to the highest horse will be in evidence. The races begin at 2 o'clock sharp.

Two particularly interesting events will be the fifteen-mile Australian pursuit race and the two y-five-mile free-for-all.

MAY 1 RULING AS TO OUTLAWS WILL STAND, SAYS COMMISSION

Word was received yesterday from the National Commission at Cincinnati by Bill Lange, the Pacific Coast representative, that the May 1 ruling would be strictly enforced. The edict handed down at that time is to the effect that those men playing in outlaw leagues who have violated either the reserved clause, or who are contrary to the rule and are recognized as players under the national agreement, must return to their respective clubs before the 1st of May or else not be allowed to play in organized baseball outside of the Pacific Coast League for a term of three or five years, according to the nature of their offense.

Acting upon this ruling, "Red" Davis, who, some few days ago left the Fresno club to rejoin the Little Rock Club in Arkansas, and "Big" Billis, also a former member of the outlaw Tigers, who returned recently to Pennsylvania, have been stopped from playing on the organized clubs. Davis has written a letter to Ewing asking to get on with some club in the coast league.

The same treatment, it is said, will be meted out to all the other players now with the big league who have left the outlaw clubs since May 1.

According to this decision of the commission, Henderson will not be allowed to join Cleveland, despite the strenuous efforts of Roy, Maguire and other scouts have been making of late to get the former Portland player to sign a two-year contract with the Naps. Anticipating the firm stand that would be taken by the final judges of organized baseball, President Summers of Cleveland now comes out with a statement that no inducements were ever held out to the star pitcher of Moreland's staff to play with Cleveland.

Angel Manager Drops in With New Bonnet

Bill Lane, who jumped from the State League to the Oakland team in the Coast League, has hopped back again into the outlaw organization. Lane was not in uniform yesterday, and it is reported he has joined the Stockton team, who have with Oakland two weeks and was never sent in to pitch.

Manager Berry of the Los Angeles

club started the natives yesterday by putting in his appearance with a sky-plate that is considered the rage in the orange belt. All that it needed to make it a Parisian extravaganza were a few frills and buds, for it lacked in none of the other qualities, having the necessary loud colors, smart and size.

Van Hatten officiated behind the plate and gave satisfaction in calling balls and strikes.

Transportation Men to Play Alameda Alerts

Since the beginning of the baseball season the Alameda Alerts have been trimming their opponents to a frazzle and this afternoon when they line up against the fast Transportation team they figure on administering a wallop similar to that which has been the regular thing handed out by Krieg and Kihn's team of leather handlers.

The game is called at 2:30 o'clock at Recreation Park and while the visiting team is one of the fastest in the trans-pac league, the Alamedans promise a game that will make the fans sit up and take notice.

Walter Ryan will be behind the bat and this player it is rumored in baseball circles, will soon don the uniform of one of the professional leagues. He is battling good and has an almost errorless record behind the plate. He has received an offer from both the Coast and State leagues.

The San Leandro team is leading in the percentage table of the transpac league with .831 but as they have only played six games against the Alerts' twelve games, the Alerts' .818, the local aggregation claims the cup of tea. The Transportation are not far behind with .735 in the average list. The United Railroads boast of an average of .750. Fruitvale has been handed the sleeping potion and is considered but of the running for the pennant.

The lineup for tomorrow is as follows: Transportation—Mitchell, 2b; Coughlin, lf; Nicholson, cf; Gimmelman, 1b; McCann, 3b; Paglia, ss; Jenkins, p; Pearson, c; Benishoff, rf.

Why you should buy on credit
A man told me that prior to the big fire he always paid cash, but immediately after the fire he was temporarily broke and needed credit; but when he applied at the stores where he had been trading they told him they only extended credit to their old customers, and as his name was not on their books they did not know him—see the point? Establish a credit, get acquainted and let the merchant know you trade at his store. It pays.

STEAMER RACING WITH NEW RAW SILK TAX
SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The steamer Asia, from Hongkong, came on board a large and valuable cargo, and is making a race against time to get here before the change in the tariff is made, as it is expected that a tax may be laid upon both tea and raw silk. The Asia has on board 110 tons of raw silk, valued at nearly a million dollars. In the cargo there is also 1100 tons of tea for points east of this port and about 200 tons for the local trade.
Honolulu will be cut out and the Asia is due here on June 23 by the latest.
Most of the tea which arrived on the Manchuria has been shipped East. The shipments aggregate 27,000 packages, which, with 6000 packages for this port, made up a large part of the cargo.
The scheme of the belt was unquestionably worked out, the faces of the coins being inscribed with the years that had marked their married life. Following are those who contributed to the gift:

Oakland Capitalist Who Gave His Birds to Golden Gate Park

THE KNAVE

George A. Knight Is Mentioned for Office of District Attorney

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—Golden Gate Park is the beneficiary of the liberality of the rich. Some of them, like Sharon and Lick, wait until they are dead, others, like Claus Spreckels and Huntington, do the turn in the flesh. The most significant of the recent donations to that lucky playground comes from an Oakland heir to millions, and thereby hangs a tale.

This Oakland magnate inherited blocks on your Oakland Broadway, filled from cellar to roof with tenants who put up rents that aggregate the ransom of a king. He also inherited a block farther up town that is vivid with flora that would make Calypso jealous. Not only did this ancestral home of the hei's family snugly in flowers and exotic trees, but it supported an aviary filled with birds of plumage rare. There were pheasants with tails five feet long and brilliantly colored, birds of Paradise, wee fire birds, crested cockatoos, parrots that called for crackers in the German tongue of their owner and rare pigeons that pout. There were ring doves that cooed in the cadence that charmed old Omar Khayyam. In fact, this excelled all the private aviaries of the State.

Your Mayor Mott, who has an appetite for birds that runs from quail on toast on up to the aesthetic, conceived the idea that this collection would adorn the Lake Merritt Park and that he owed it to his city to make a donation. So, one day he approached the heir to all these rare feathers, with a view of buying all the birds and making them a present to Oakland for her park. The price ran far up into the hundreds but Mayor Mott did not haggle and thought he had landed the prize. But there's many a slip between the buyer and the birds. In a few days the heir approached him with the proposition that he procure the purchase of the ancestral block, with all its high fence and flora, by the city of Oakland for park purposes, the price being $450,000. The Mayor found himself unable to see it, and immediately communicated his lack of vision to the heir.

After letting things cool for a few days, the Mayor and the heir met again on the proposition to buy the birds, when the heir informed the Mayor that he had donated the whole collection to Golden Gate Park. And the renters of the Broadway properties go on paying rents, and his fellow citizens all journey to San Francisco when they want to look upon his rare birds. If other people who are enriched by Oakland property follow his example Golden Gate Park will soon become crowded with their benefactions, and Oakland will go into the market and buy such collections as may be needed to lure visitors to her parks and playgrounds, Selah. And the renters they pay their rents.

A search warrant seems to be necessary to find a candidate for Mayor. A suspicion is growing that a candidate is required to subject himself to the control of a small number of individuals, with various schemes to push, so when independent men are marched up to be measured for a gag and muzzle they back off, and the self-elected and self-righteous guardians of the city continue the quest.

There is no focus yet on a District Attorney, and that office is cavorting around for a rider. Recently some citizens, who are looking ahead to the days to come, to the time when San Francisco should glory in the strength of her judiciary, have tried to settle on George A. Knight for this office. They point to his independence of fortune and of character, his skill and training as a lawyer and his experience as a prosecutor and his eminence as a Republican and a citizen. If these things counted just now his selection would seem easy. But do they count?

Will no man save us from this man Spreckels and his man Burns?

Such is the cry of the Republican reformers of the Independent Clubs. Whenever they get together, there come Rudolph Spreckels and Detective Burns. The two stand around and spy. They attempt to dictate and take a hand. The Independents try to shake them, but they will not be shaken. It is felt that Spreckels and Burns hurt the cause and are a distinct detriment to the movement. Most of the delegates do not like Spreckels and Burns. They will have nothing to do with them. But the two undesirables will not quit. They must see they are not wanted, but they hang on like leeches. Perhaps they have no other place to go. But it is dreadfully embarrassing for those Independents. They don't want to be tarred by Spreckels or pitched by Burns. But what are they going to do about it? Every time they have any sort of a gathering, there come Spreckels and Burns, hanging around on the outside, butting in, trying to take a part in the play. So the leaders ask, Will no one rid us of these two political nuisances?

The women of our fashionable Town and Country Club, who will soon move into their finely furnished club-rooms on Union Square, are boasting beautifully of how they forced the Police Commissioners to refuse a saloon license to a man who was going to open a saloon in Union Square avenue. But suppose those women should be forced to find another tenant to take the place of the saloon man—how would they feel about that? And yet wouldn't that be Haroun Al Raschid justice?

"Union Square avenue" is our bad old friend Morton street in disguise. It is an alley running from Union Square through two blocks to Kearny street. Formerly it was the alley of the painted women—filled with brothels and saloons. Now it is more respectable.

Well, the Down Town Association arranged with the Police Commissioners that no more saloon licenses should be granted on the main streets in the shopping district. They also agreed they would not oppose saloons on the alleys, where they were out of the way. The women located their club at the corner of Union Square avenue (alley). A saloon man of good reputation applied for a saloon license on the alley in the rear of their building—and not near their entrance, which is on Stockton street. They threw up their hands and sought allies in the Down Town Association. That organization said it had agreed not to oppose saloons on the alleys, and so would not act. But the women pulled and hauled and beat that saloon man out of his license.

But the property where the saloon was to be is vacant. It brings in no rent. Why shouldn't the victorious women of the fashionable club rent the premises for the amount the saloon man was to pay? When I am dictator that sort of justice will be done.

I think poor old Whittell owns the property; so stay the ready tear. But suppose he should move a Chinese laundry in there—how would the women like that? And he might put an anatomical museum on the lot next to the club entrance, as he also owns that property. Wouldn't that be just too lovely!

Well, the Calhoun case is about over and nobody has been shot or stabbed or even punched. I wonder if these "fighting" lawyers ever stop to think what a wide grin the community is wearing at their expense.

Here for now nearly three years these lawyers have exhausted vituperation and billingsgate in lingual attacks upon each other. They have called every name from "liar" up and down that is generally considered fighting talk. They have wasted insults enough to have drenched the land with blood. And not a blow struck!

The armed men have clanked in and clanked out of the courtroom. Revolvers have dropped to the floor or have been taken from pockets. But the only "petulant pop of the pistol" was when that half-demented man shot down Heney, and the armed men stood by and did nothing.

Isn't all the fight talk farce? Are not all the gun fighting men false alarms? Wouldn't any stout hearted fellow be safe in kicking any one of these men who have so long used fighting words without raising a fist? And I wonder if they ever wake up in the night and think how ludicrous they are—what an awful josh. And from now on, whenever the fight talk starts, the judge ought to order the talkers to step right outside and finish then and there. That would put a stop to all the tiresome blackguarding that is merely wind.

It seems that E. J. de Nivernais (Livernash) has married a fat fortune again. He certainly has a way with the women, erratic though he be in his relations with men. His first wife was the daughter of the richest man in Santa Rosa, and now it turns out that the woman he married in New York the other day, so soon after his Reno divorce, has a wad as long as a stocking.

She is the mysterious lady who bore some sort of a relationship to Governor Budd, and who backed that brilliant man when he was in sore need of funds. He used to call her his niece, but his old mother even now says she is his daughter. The Governor always did have a way of surrounding himself with mysteries. But the fact remains that the lady has a fat fortune, and her new husband will teach her how to spend it brilliantly. There are few men who can adorn a lively coterie with abler grace than de Nivernais.

Some of the ways have pointed out that he carried his passion for eccentric surprises right into his wedding ceremony. A Catholic, he was married in a Congregational church; and, the friend and Congressman of Union Labor, he had his Japanese valet as a witness to the ceremony. But everything is forgiven Genius.

That black little gipsy Rigo has come to town and has advertised himself as usual. He looks anything but a lady-killer, but he seems to know how to win his way with the sex. He frankly admits he has learned how to make the goo-goo eyes.

But just at present he is a fearful incubus on the Techau Tavern people. They have him on their hands and don't know what to do with him. They can't get their restaurant finished for the opening until July 1st, and here are Rigo, his wife and his band, and their salary began to run on the 15th of last month.

That means about seven weeks of idleness, and the contract calls for $600 a week—$4200 for nothing. The Tavern people wanted to farm the gipsy out to Los Angeles and get back part of their outlay, but he wouldn't stand for it, insisting that his contract was to play in San Francisco and not in the southern city. So no wonder the press agent is working overtime to get as much advertising as possible out of a bad contract. The wonder is that a newspaper would stand for a first page advertisement of the little fakir and a silly tale that Clara Ward Chimay wants him back again.

It is no longer the rat that menaces. Whiskerandos is a thing of the past. Now comes the squirrel as the abiding menace to the public health, and surely there is enough of him to keep the whole Federal health department busy for years to be.

The scene of the conflict is now in Contra Costa county. There an infected squirrel has been found. There is Dr. Rucker directing the health crusade. The ground squirrels are being given to slaughter by the thousands—but there are tens and hundreds of thousands yet abroad in the land.

Now the plague crusade in San Francisco did a lot of good. It exterminated the rat and minimized the flea. And now if it will go ahead and exterminate the ground squirrel, by raising a plague scare about the little pest, it will confer a wondrous benefit on the California farmer. So all things work out for the best, even in the scheme of scare and quarantine.

A good many cople have been waiting and wondering whether we would have a contest over the late Captain Charles Nelson's will. The fine old chap left a large fortune and a divided family. Generally under such circumstances there is a legal fight in sight.

The widow, living in the great home across the bay, was the second Mrs. Nelson, and had been housekeeper before she was wife. The daughter, now Mrs. Eugene Bresse, didn't get along with her stepmother; and it has been noticed that Captain Nelson died in his daughter's house.

Then there are the Tysons—four of 'em—all nephews. Nelson brought the Tysons out from the home land. They were hardy young Norsemen, who hardly spoke the language. But they made their way, and are now at the head of banks, insurance companies, lumber business—one is a pilot. Nelson was very proud of these nephews and their business and social successes. Few things pleased him more than praise of the Tysons.

But the question grows whether those he left behind will share his love for the nephews, and whether there will be a fight over the cutting up of another one of California's great self-made fortunes.

John Mitchell, assessor of Placer county, has been given a juicy official plum by the Southern Pacific Company people in this city. Chief Counsel William F. Herrin of the company has appointed him assistant tax attorney under Jere Burke, who was recently given the position of tax attorney in addition to his other duties. Burke succeeded E. Black Ryan, who, after forty years service, asked to be placed on the Harriman retired list along with General T. H. Goodman, W. J. Willcutt and other old officials. Mitchell will report to Burke and attend to most of the company's tax business. Burke has so many other irons in the fire for the corporation that it is impossible for him to perform all that fell to Ryan. Mitchell has been made assistant because of his knowledge of the tax laws of California and their application to corporate properties. He is said to have made one of the best records of any California county assessor in the past fifteen years. Mitchell is not to disturb the force of women clerks in the office. One of them, a Mrs. Shields, has had long experience in the office and had she been a man it is certain she would have been given the place Mitchell gets. Mr. Herrin is said to consider her as well posted on the tax laws of the State and how Southern Pacific taxes should be and are paid as anybody in his law department. But she's a woman and had to be overlooked in selecting an assistant for Burke. Mitchell is not to take his new place for several months. That is why publicity of the appointment is being withheld. Herrin is to return from Europe in September. He will then, it is understood, formally announce Mitchell's new position. The salary is to be $5000 a year and he will have charge of all the taxes of the company in Arizona, New Mexico, California and Nevada. The position is one of great responsibility and a dozen men with strong influence sought the job.

Spanish scholars here are chuckling among themselves over the recent dictum by Mayor E. R. Taylor, Joseph D. Redding and James D. Phelan at a recent St. Francis banquet as to the proper pronunciation of the family name of Don Gaspar Portola, the discoverer of the bay of San Francisco, in whose honor we are to have a Portola week of festivity next October. If you remember the artistic, clever, plausible Redding insisted the name should be pronounced with the accent on the last syllable, the "a" being short. Our lawyer-poet Mayor, with no knowledge of the rudiments of the Spanish language, fell in love with the Redding view. Phelan, whose intellectuality is mostly on the surface, but who is an adept in pretense, feigned to disagree with his friend Redding and the Mayor of the town. He finally, like Platt with Conkling, said "me too." Several well known teachers of Spanish insist that all three of these shining lights at the banquet were ignorant of their subject. Had Portola been a Portuguese their pronunciation of the name would be correct, these teachers say. But the doughty old Don Gaspar was of Castilian blood, pure and simple. Therefore the only proper way to pronounce his name is with the accent on the first syllable, together with a rolling sound to the "r" in connection with the "p." In this connection it is a matter of comment how Eastern and Washington circles have taken to the idea of a Portola celebration in San Francisco, and there is no doubt it will rival the famous Midwinter Fair as a gala event, and attract crowds from all over the world.

Speaking of Phelan, the Bohemian Club is now having smooth sailing with its scheme for a new club-house, and work on the foundation is progressing rapidly since he is no longer connected with the club's building committee. As an idol of the institution he is now shattered, and William H. Crocker, Dr. J. Wilson Shiels and their coterie were the iconoclasts who did the breaking of the idol. The new home will represent to the Bohemians an investment of about $380,000. It is noteworthy how many new club-houses are going up in various parts of the down-town section, or are about to be built. There is the Pacific Union, with a $500,000 project. Willie Polk is the architect. There can be mentioned the University Club, for which the Stanford Estate has advanced $200,000, and the Argonaut, Family, Elks, Concordia and other social institutions. In the aggregate these club-houses when completed will represent an investment of over $1,500,000, and give to the club phase of San Francisco life a most charming and attractive effect. In all of these institutions everything will be new from roof to basement, with all the modern accessories money can obtain. The Press Club in its new home on Market street, next to the Pacific building, and the Transportation Club in the Flood building, must not be overlooked in taking a survey of local clubdom. Nothing in the city is handsomer than the circular assembly room of the Transportation Club.

So they gamble in these social retreats like before the fire? Tell it in a whisper. They do. Poker is the favorite form of gambling, but the rules are rigid against high stakes in all of them. The Pacific Union and Bohemian allow a $10 limit, but the other night at the Pacific Union six cronies elevated the limit to $50, and one solid, staid professional man was out a couple of thousand dollars before the party broke up. He is telling his friends "never again." They don't believe he will remain away very long.

Mrs. Eleanor Martin, her son, J. Downey Harvey, and J. Athern Folger, the three largest stockholders in the Ocean Shore Railroad, the line that is to skirt the coast between this city and Santa Cruz as a double-track electric road, are making a determined struggle to complete that project. Mrs. Martin and Harvey have already put about $1,000,000 in cash into the road, while Folger has fully $250,000 in it. An eastern financial agent has been here recently inspecting the property with the view of taking two million and a half of the company's bonds. A similar amount has already been sold. This agent has returned East to make his report. What it will be cannot be predicted. The road is to be eighty-two miles long and about sixty-four miles of single track are now laid. Harvey does not seem to be downcast over his prospects as a railroad magnate, but it is said Mrs. Martin is getting tired of repeated calls for money in the way of stock assessments. Harvey and Folger are said to think their company's franchises in the city alone are worth more than a million dollars, and that with a better money market they will be able to sell enough bonds to finish the road. The portion being operated now is doing a good business.

While the tactful and popular dowager Mrs. Martin may not be enthused over her and her son's railroad, she is as much interested in society as ever, and from chaperoning buds and belles to attending dinners is never at a loss to fill in her time. The other night at a dinner on Broadway she was quite humorous. On her right at the table of Mr. and Mrs. So and So sat one of the beaux of the town. He likes to look on wine when it is red, but with much discretion don't look on it too long. This particular evening, at a full course dinner, both Mrs. Martin and herself noticed there was plenty of claret and white wine and a scarcity of champagne. He whispered the fact to the charming dowager. Whispering back in turn she said to him:

"Never mind. When you come to my house next week for dinner you can swim in it."

And the beau who loves good dinners is waiting for next week to roll around.

Now that I am on the subject of drinkables, your readers, many of whom doubtless will go this summer to visit the Alaska-Yukon Exposition, must beware of the Oregon "dry" belt while traveling on the Oregon Express and the new Mt. Shasta Limited. From the north California line 190 miles up into Oregon the trains pass through "dry" counties and their officials are zealous in arresting dining car employees and passengers who violate the prohibition regulations. You can carry your own pocket flask, but you must not buy any liquor. The other day north from Ashland, while the train was at a station, a constable caught a dining car employee selling a bottle of beer to a commercial traveler. Both men were arrested and the train had to leave them behind. Luckily the drummer was assisted by a friend in getting rid of the bottle while being hustled out of the car by the officer. The drummer was held as a witness against the diner's superintendent. Before a justice of the peace the commercial man was made a witness.

"Did you buy beer from the defendant?" he was asked.

"No," was the reply.

"What did you purchase?"

"Sea foam."

"Did it look like beer?"

"Yes."

"Did it taste like beer?"

"Somewhat."

"Now, wasn't it beer?"

"No."

"Well, what was it?"

"Sea foam."

The bottle not being in evidence the defendant won and had to be discharged, all of which is meant as a timely warning to the thirsty when in the Oregon "dry" region.

Stanley Dollar, the well known clubman and steamship official, is still on the warpath. His advertisement the other day in the papers warning storekeepers that he would not be responsible for debts incurred by his wife was the sequel to a fight he had with a certain well-known automobile agent of Oakland for alleged attentions to Mrs. Dollar. The two men had some whirlwind fistfights for a few minutes, so it is reported, and honors are said to have been about even. The alleged gay Lothario denies the justice of Stanley Dollar's accusations and insists that he will make the latter eat his words if he hears any more talk on the subject coming from him.

On the other hand, the steamship man is represented as being as belligerent as ever and his friends predict a rough and tumble fight if he meets the other fellow again. Friends of both men are trying to keep them apart. Both are hot-headed and until they cool off their friends will be in an apprehensive mood.

The town is slot-machine mad. At the end of this month this form of gambling ceases in the city, so thousands are taking a last fling at it in this month of June. There are 6000 of these machines. This is known from the tax collector's records. Many of these machines are in places which keep open all night, while most of them are in stores or stands which keep open from twelve to fourteen hours. Several of the shrewdest gamblers in town have been making a close study of the business of gambling during the past two or three weeks. In their opinion, never in its history has San Francisco been gambling on such a large scale as is now going on with the nickel-in-the-slot devices. Hundreds of the cigar stands today do not make any pretense of selling cigars. They have not time to sell cigars. They are too busy raking in the coin and paying it out. The gamblers in question say it is a reasonable estimate to state that $360,000 in nickels are passing through these machines daily. This means $10,800,000 for the thirty days of June as a total of 216 million nickels. They base the calculation on the result of considerable observations to the effect that twenty men on an average play each machine daily, and that each one will average $3 a day. In the twenty men per day for each machine they include those who may play three, four, or six times a day. It is in this way that they figure 120,000 men are playing the 6000 machines daily. At an average of $3 per man, this brings the daily play up to the astonishing sum of $260,000. I do not pretend to vouch for this calculation. The point is, however, that thousands of dollars are being gambled daily in these machines. With them gone, what next?

There are cults and cults in this glorious State, and particularly in and around San Francisco, where devotees by the hundred follow some peculiar idea. But in spite of their number a new cult has come to town.

It can be called the hatless cult, for a number of men and women here and in San Jose and Los Gatos are forming a society, the main doctrine or precept of which is that after a probation of three months no member shall be in good standing who shall wear any headgear of any kind or description at any time or place. It is impossible to believe that the society will include any young and pretty women. However that may be, this coterie of the hatless is to have meetings this summer near Los Gatos. A high priest is coming from the East to help form the society. By name, he is Emil Ruff of Minnesota. For twenty-five years he has never worn a hat. During the past thirteen years he has been superintendent of a gas company in Rochester, and is said to be a man of means and education. Some of his friends here, who are to welcome him and join the society, state that he has no particular prejudice against hats per se, but as a personal adornment he has no use for them. He can find no record in the Bible where Adam and Eve indulged in silk hats on the latest style of mushroom and basket millinery, and after a careful perusal of the later parts of the same authority he still finds that from Noah down hats were not popular. Following his Biblical researches farther, Mr. Ruff finds a plentiful scarcity of hairless heads, which he correlates with the fact there were no corresponding hatted craniums.

The dismissal of two railroad officials in this city during the past month or two, namely Peter R. Lund of the Southern Pacific and John A. Gill of the New York Central lines, shows how two otherwise able fellows failed to realize how much big corporations bank on tact and discretion among those who work for them. Mr. Lund enjoyed full power over the Harriman lines in the matter of keeping conductors in the straight path of duty and in dealing with the brotherhood of conductors in all disputes affecting the honesty of any of its members. He ran foul of some of his superiors for lack of ordinary diplomacy in his relations with them and had to go. Mr. Gill is recognized as an able freight official, but he openly criticized people above him in his own and other companies. That explains his official downfall. Personally, both men have lots of friends who are sorry for the predicament they now find themselves in. Sealed lips are more valuable than gold at times, Gill now realizes to his cost. Lured by following the line of least resistance in dealing with his superiors would still have had his high-salaried job.

It is said that even men like J. C. Stubbs and Julius Kruttschnitt, two of the ablest railroad men this country has produced, think twice before they contradict Edward H. Harriman, and think three times three before they talk for publication about the Harriman roads and business.

Dan Deane, "Handsome Dan" as his many friends familiarly called him, has left town for keeps. He has gone back to New York. Deane came here after the fire as assistant manager of the Hotel Savoy under James Dunne, formerly of New York and New Haven. This is the Dunne who married "Dixie" Rosenbaum's widow and spent $80,000 of her half million fortune before he deserted her and fled East to join a former sweetheart. After Dunne's departure Deane opened a saloon with the financial backing of a friend, Edward Montgomery by name. The latter finally took over the saloon to protect himself and Deane then thought he had had enough of the town. His friend Montgomery came here from the East without a cent, but has been lucky in the railroad and industrial stock market during the past few months to the extent of cleaning up about $100,000. It is said Deane is to join the New York detective force, of which he was at one time a member.

Contrary to expectations, Mrs. Dunne has not brought suit for divorce. Her marriage to Dunne was her third matrimonial trip. The first one netted her $500,000. Harry Rogers, her second husband, spent $30,000 of her money before she got rid of him. Dunne, as stated, has cost her $80,000. The woman he returned to back East has even more money than Mrs. Dunne can command and has spent lots of it on that worthy.

A familiar figure at the Palace before the fire and at the Fairmont, John Erikson, a young Seattle banker, was married at Windsor, Vt., last night to Miss Bessie Boeman, a daughter of a law partner of Joseph S. Choate of New York, formerly the United States ambassador to Great Britain. The bride is a niece of the poet Oliver Wendell Holmes and a cousin of Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court. Mr. and Mrs. Erikson are to enjoy their honeymoon in Europe, and on their return will spend their time between Seattle and this city. Numerous telegrams of congratulation were sent the couple from here yesterday.

The rivalry between Harry McKannay, private secretary to Poet Taylor, and Edwin T. McMurray, for the bossship of the self-styled "Independent Republicans," has furnished considerable entertainment for the lookers-on in politics. McKannay was picked up by the reactionaries to serve as secretary to former Supervisor Boxton while that official was acting as their good dog Mayor. McKannay's main duty was to be watchdog of the good-dog Boxton. The latter was such a versatile boddler that the reactionaries considered that he needed watching. When Boxton was retired for Taylor, McKannay was held over to play the private secretary to the poet Mayor. Not that Taylor needed watching, but it was deemed advisable to keep some one at his elbow, for Taylor was a sentimentalist, and it was feared that in a poetic frenzy he might give some of his political patronage to others than the reform grafters who were seeking to purify the municipal government by placing themselves in jobs.

Through this distribution of patronage McKannay became a small boss, not being of sufficient caliber to make a real leader. He did politics with the antis in both the Democratic and Republican parties, and in time found himself up against McMurray for the leadership of the Independents who, for the purposes of the present campaign, have styled themselves, the Municipal League of Independent Republican Clubs.

The show-down between these rival bosses came in the convention which the Independents had appointed to head off the electors in the nomination of a municipal ticket and to prevent, if possible, the people having a voice at the direct primary. McKannay in this fight tied up with Rudolph Spreckels and Gunshoe Burns. This trio expected to capture the convention and it looked as though they had a chance of doing so up to the day of the first meeting of the nominating assembly.

The delegates to this assembly for the disinfection of all that is bad in local politics, and the putting of the pure reactionaries in the saddle, had been appointed from the district clubs, more than one-half of which were paper. The reactionaries, however, considered their cause so holy that the swindling of the electors with a few bogus clubs was held to be justified, if in the end they could again capture the municipal government and the jobs.

The McKannay-Gunshoe Burns contingent thought that they had a majority of the convention. Gunshoe turned in to this good cause the delegation from the Thirty-third Assembly district, headed by his friend and associate in trade, Harry Osgood. While Osgood was no longer in the direct employment of Burns, it was claimed that he was still loyal to the chief of the gum-

But McMurray controlled the advisory committee of the Independents and proceeded to substitute his own delegations for those of McKannay and Burns in some of the paper clubs. In this way he secured a majority of at least twenty in the convention. McKannay and his associates in political purity, seeing that they were beaten, ate humble pie and joined in the election of Rolla V. Watt, who was McMurray's candidate for chairman. Not that it made any material difference who won in this contest, the only issue being whether McMurray or McKannay should deliver to Spreckels, although it was well understood that Rudolph preferred the McKannay-Gunshoe combination and did what he could to insure their success.

Prior to his defeat in this peculiarly pure convention, McKannay had been dicker with the regular organization, but notwithstanding he is the distributor of Poet Taylor's political patronage he had too high an idea of his value and was permitted to continue his work of municipal purification undisturbed by the contaminating influences of the regular machine of the Republican organization.

The scheme to flim-flam the public, which was so successfully worked two years ago by the fusing of the McNab Democrats with the longhairs, who then called themselves the Good Government League, out of which political miscegenation came the present hybrid municipal administration, is in process of repetition. One section of the holier than thous, with the uncut hair, are calling themselves, in this canvass, the Municipal League of Republican Clubs, under which alias they are stalking public preferment and patronage. It is quite apparent that the McNab machine and these politically sanctified reformers are seeking to amalgamate, which means to divide the municipal offices and consequent spoils.

The boss of the Municipal League is Edwin T. McMurray, and it is understood that his wedge of the political angel cake in the cut-up is to be the attorneyship to the Treasurer, the attempted accomplishment of his appointment to which place is to be effected by the nomination of Frank H. Marvin for Treasurer. Marvin is the president of the Good Government League, and as the attorneyship of the Treasurer is worth, in fees, from $10,000 to $20,000 a year, it would seem to be worth playing for even by two such reformers as Marvin and McMurray.

In this pooling of political issues by indirection, by Rudolph Spreckels and Gavin McNab, it is predicted that the latter will put Heney on his ticket, together with Marvin, Percy V. Long for City Attorney, and other alleged Goo Goos, in consideration of Godchaux, the Recorder; Billy Hynes, Public Administrator; the Democratic barnacle Board of Supervisors, who have been clinging to the municipal craft and gaining their sustenance therefrom, these many years, and others, being placed on the League ticket.

The Scotch boss, in the struggle to continue the existence of the Democratic machine, which represents only about 20 per cent of the registered vote of the city, has undoubtedly found himself hard pressed, and has been obliged to bring into play all the shrewdness and fitness for which he is noted.

The apparent purpose of this combination is to continue in office the bulk of the present discredited local administration and to permit some of the Goo Goos to break in at the municipal pie counter as a reward for their long and unselfish efforts to get a nibble of the fat things political for which the taxpayers are obliged to foot the charges.

It is difficult to see, however, that any but a mongrel administration can come from such an amalgamation of hybrids for the sole purpose of political spoils.

The ease with which a man may get his name placed in the mentioned class for almost any political office he may suggest was recently illustrated in the case of John Lackmann, former Supervisor and former Sheriff of San Francisco. Dr. Goodale, family physician for the Lackmanns, was an aspirant for the nomination for Coroner. Failing to receive the desired encouragement from the men who do politics, Dr. Goodale prescribed the office of Mayor for his patient, "Honest John" Lackmann. The doctor took the prescription around to the newspaper offices and the next morning Lackmann was a "leading candidate" for Mayor on the League ticket, one live journal devoting a column on its front page to the announcement.

This is not the first time "Honest John" has been an aspirant for the office of Mayor. A few years ago when San Francisco was laboring under the burden of another reform movement, I think it called itself the San Francisco Republican League, Lackmann's name was presented to its executive committee for Mayor. This executive body included such sparkling gems of reform as Dan Ryan, Dick Welch, Fairfax Whelan, Dave Rich and others of equal magnitude. The committee practically decided to endorse Lackmann for Mayor and so informed him. Incidentally the committee thought they would consult W. F. Herrin and ascertain if the reform suggestion was agreeable to him. Fairfax Whelan took upon himself the duty of conveying the tidings to the Big Chief. But to the amazement of Whelan, when he reached Herrin's office he found that Lackmann had arrived ahead of him.

So envious was this reform committee of Lackmann's powers as a sprinter that they turned him down and the city was deprived of all the possibilities of an "Honest John" administration.

and John McDougald. A characteristic of the "Honest John" in local politics is that he is always on tap for any nomination or any job, with a salary guaranteed by the city treasury from Mayor down. Should this "Honest John" coterie continue to increase and multiply politically, they will become as powerful as the gallant "Ole Bills," who once dominated Alameda county and California.

The citizens of San Francisco are not proud of their Police Department. When Chief Cook was given that appointment the people were willing to accept him at par as a police official and to give him every opportunity to make good. They had heard much of the effectiveness of that "evil eye" of his among the Chinese and they expected him to train that magic orb on burglars, garroters, footpads, pickpockets, hold-up men and other criminals with which the city is infested. But Cook seems to have closed that remarkable eye, or it is suffering from strabismus, or can it be possible that the present Chief is only a blinker after all?

In the beginning of his career as Chief, Cook announced that all reports of robberies, hold-ups and other crimes received by him would be given to the press, he believing that publicity might be effective to reduce the epidemic of crimes of this class. While the daily list is a long one, it does not cover one-half the crimes committed. It is not an unusual thing for a series of burglaries and hold-ups to take place in one night in a given section of the city. The people have come to regard as ineffective and useless reporting their losses at police headquarters and many will not waste their time in so doing.

Citizens are hoping that a time may come when Chief Cook will be able to use the police force for the protection of citizens in their ordinary pursuits as such instead of diverting the best men under his command to the aid of private interests that might well pay for their own protection.

A somewhat singular coincidence is shown by the criminal conditions in San Francisco. About the time District Attorney Langdon placed on the payroll of the city a $70,000 squad of gumshoe men, spies, eavesdroppers and other things, burglaries, hold-ups and similar crimes began to increase.

That faction of the local Democracy who are arrayed against the regular, or McNab, machine have been furnishing considerable entertainment for the politicians recently, not the least feature of which is the joke, McLeran for Mayor. This movement is composed in the main of "Buck's Bums," being the survivors of a once live political organization, of which Chris Buckley was the boss. These one-time stars of practical politics united their talents with those of former Judge Jerry, and brother Matt Sullivan, who are now engaged in blazing the path of municipal purity and other things. This rump, having dominated a ticket, furnished political pastime by going to the leaders of the Good Government League and attempting to copy the scheme of Gavin McNab of two years ago by offering to fuse with the Goo Goos in the municipal canvass.

Now some of the G. G.'s were themselves once lined up as "Buck's Business Men," and they immediately recognized the brand on "Buck's Bums" and declined the proffered alliance without even an apology.

The Good Government League has announced that it will not take any part in the primary election, but will put forward a ticket by petition at the general election in November. The Goo Goos are now very busy endeavoring to straighten out the Board of Public Works, which is the product of their own labors, in the interest of reform and jobs, two years ago. The double G's are so unappreciative of their efforts of two years back that they now allege that the Board of Works is crooked and that they will go into the courts and prove it. The Goo Goos claim to have evidence of putrid practices in the engineer's and other departments of the Board of Works, and declare that their exposure is of more importance at this time than politics.

That branch of the present impotent municipal administration that is called the Health Department, to facilitate the apportionment of political jobs, is quarreling with itself. It is to be hoped that some good will come of the exposures the members of the board and employes are making of each other. This department ranks with the other branches of the municipal machine in incompetence or wilful neglect of its duties. By reason of its failure to enforce the laws relative to sanitation this aggregation of political doctors is laying the foundation for a rat and fly epidemic in this city. Garbage barrels and receptacles for refuse are permitted to remain uncovered for weeks and months and rodents roam like hordes of quail through rear premises in some sections of the Western Addition. If these conditions are permitted to continue it will not be long before the citizens will be clamoring for the recall of Dr. Blue to proceed under Federal authority and improve the sanitation of San Francisco and possibly prevent this city and California at large, because of conditions here, being quarantined by the outside world. Probably the eminent physicians appointed to the Health Department by Poet Taylor, after having been selected by private interests, would not object to another financial harvest for the impecunious members of their profession, such as accompanied the last sanitation festival held in this city under the auspices of the marine authorities.

That the citizens will be pleased to assess themselves a half million dollars or more to rid the city of a fly and rat epidemic that is now being bred by the incompetence, if not criminal neglect, of the local health authorities, is doubtful.

The passing under the hammer of the old Matthews home on Webster street writes the last chapter of the abode of a family of Oakland social pioneers. Some twenty or more years ago it radiated social life. Here the ultra socialites were wont to gather at the bidding of the lovely daughter of the house.

Upon these frequent occasions particular distinction was lent the affair by the presence of the handsomest of the galaxy of San Francisco cousins—Nellie Joffe. The fair Nellie owed her social vogue to her pulchritude and the warm admiration bestowed upon her by the coterie lead by Tessie Fair and Jennie Blair rather than to the sweet jingle of ample ducats.

But to be of that coterie was to our social ilk to have reached the zenith of social greatness and so the attendance of Nellie Joffe at her cousin's affairs raised their value to the highest pitch. Her coming warmed the very cockles of the social heart. We were wont to prostrate ourselves before the prodigy of her San Francisco attainments. She was the quintessence of desirability and we bruised our shins to be in her proximity.

MINNIE MATTHEWS AS A BRIDE.

While her social popularity was still in its teens, Minnie Matthews married Robert Cryan, an Irish gentleman of vast estates, and affiliated herself with the social folk of Dublin, Rome and Paris. Save during the brief space of her intermittent visits to our coast we have seen precious little of the erstwhile belle.

After oft-repeated seasons Nellie Joffe threw San Francisco matchmaking mammas into a perfect conniption fit by stalking off with the matrimonial Croesus. Somehow the dowagers had not looked upon the seasoned belle as a contestant for the youthful prize de luxe and the elite of the cross bay social contingent had hardly caught its breath between the time of the marriage sans ostentation and the fanfare of trumpets that greeted the return of the handsome Mrs. Spreckels. Freed from stringent purse conditions and no longer pensioner on her wealthy aunt's bounty she dispensed with the Oakland contingent as gladly as a caterer with squeezed lemons and our only balm has come from the slump in her social value since her malevolent husband nailed the welfare of our sister city to the cross.

MATTHEWS BOYS DID NOT CARE FOR SOCIETY.

Later we knew the hospitality of the Matthews menage through the grace of the younger Joffe sisters for though there were three Matthews sons, and jolly blades at that, they were fearful of society and married well without the social premium. And so it remained for Marguerite Joffe, who domineered herself with her indulgent aunt to give the home its social stimulus.

This she did with dash and zest. Aided by neighborly propinquity she captured the heart of clever Herbert Moffitt. Then were the lamentations of our numerous belles like unto the wailings of Jeremiah for our matrimonial field was Sahara.

She, too, in turn, established her lares et penates on the western bay shores and Oakland is seldom included in her social entourage.

During very recent years Mr. Cryan died and our hopes were high for the return of his widow to the haunts of her social nativity. But I have it, ex cathedra, that she has small relish for our locality's society and has asserted with no slight emphasis that her future years will be spent abroad. Weighed in the balance of European fitness we have been found woefully wanting. For, breathe it low, she has characterized our functions as mere talkfests where we talk of nothing else but clothes and servants. In European circles such accessories are taken as a matter of course and never intrude themselves into social conversation.

GRUNDIES STILL TALK ABOUT A WEDDING

The grundies are still chattering over the cups at oolong time anent Nellie Chabot's sudden rush into matrimony. They had long since abandoned the idea of a cardiac culmination to her manifold social successes. Not that suitors were lacking. They were legion and kept the doorsteps blistered with their ardent heels. Year in and year out they manifested the stickability of porous plasters. But the handsome Chabot heiress was adamant. Her friends conspired all sorts of splendid alliances, but they were quickly soured with the cold water of indifference. Tales of a girlhood romance were offered as plausible explanation for her aversion to matrimonial fetters. It was said that her heart had been captured by a handsome chap possessed of neither money nor position, those necessary social letters of credit, that there was strenuous family opposition and that she was finally dissuaded from an alliance with the Apollo of the outer pale.

It during the intervening years there were inward torturing pangs Miss Chabot gave no outward visible signs. She managed to get no end of pleasure from the whirl of events. Whenever whim took her she was surfeited with fete and attention, the probable wherefore of her unheralded nuptials.

But the friends who were eager to usurp the ancient prerogative of the little love god and had no hand in this are disappointed, grievously disappointed with the match. "But then Mrs. Bothin is happy, so it is none of their business."

CLUB FAILS TO EXPEL A LIVELY MEMBER

The day's iterated talk concerns itself with the lively but futile attempt of a socially prominent woman's club to expel one of its members.

The woman in the case became possessed of much wealth through marriage with a prominent Oaklander, and by her incessant methods has gained something of a social footing. During the past earthquake days, when our hotels were filled to overflowing, she ensconced herself at the most fashionable of our town's hostilities and by her persuasive arts soon ingratiated herself into the favor of some of the most desirable guests. Young, piquant and pretty, with a penchant for entertaining her popularity grew. From the hotel acquaintanceship she soon extended her circle until it included many of the social families and finally beguiled one of the most charming ladies of the town into offering her name for club membership.

All might have run smoothly had not ambition overreached itself. Once within the club she would be Caesar or nobody and all club endeavors found her to the fore. It was then that little rumors started to circulate themselves concerning her light evasions of the red tape of life previous to her marriage. The club election brought the matter to a head. She announced herself candidate for one of the most flattering offices and by bold campaigning tried to force the members to acquiescence.

SHE WANTED A HIGH OFFICE

On the heels of the announcement of her candidacy the earlier tales grew to ugly proportion. They spread like flame. They rehearsed her low-vaulted past in the Orient where, it was told with much evidence, she practiced "Mrs. Warren's Profession." They brought the tales nearer home, brisk with San Francisco escapades. Like thunder claps they fell upon the clubbers' ears. The sponsors of her membership were warm with righteous indignation. The president was impetioned to demand her withdrawal. She interviewed the various members and obtained their authorities for the tales. She then summoned the stigmatized member and laid the charges before her.

But instead of displaying the anticipated humility she defiantly refused to hand in her resignation and told the president to prove the charges if she could. Whereupon the harassed head of the club sought out the several fountain heads of the tale, only to find that, while they willingly agreed to its veracity they refused to permit the use of their names to substantiate the charges.

Rumor being unsufficient grounds for expulsion the lady with the black alpaca past remains for the present upon the membership roll and shows alary indifference to the frapped glances of those who would be rid of her.

MRS. HOWARD GOULD WAS A SCHOOL GIRL HERE

The post mortem examination of the corpse of the Gould domestic felicity is finding many avid readers in our community.

Mrs. Howard Gould as Viola Dayan with her sister, Ella, were pupils of the Cole School, when that neighborhood's part of Adeline Street was bounded east and west by the home of many of our first families.

Both Dayan girls were conspicuously only for their extreme quiet. Viola was tall, angular and awkward and carried her head thrust far forward. Her blonde hair was worn at ugly shoulder length. There was never a hint of the later day propensity for notoriety.

I recall a tale of Ella that somehow missed the fretting of the newspaper hordes. Prior to her marriage with the stout-eyed heathen Chinese her favorite mission was the decorating of the little French church near Dupont street. One Sunday the attendants were nauseated by the deadly odor pervading the holy edifice and were horrified to find that the altars were profusely decorated with strings of garlic bulbs.

And now come the liquid and scurrilous extravagances of the younger sister! Can it be that after all virtue is only a matter of environment?

POLLY PRY.

SOCIETY

The brides still claim the attention of their friends, and now ideas as to entertaining them during the pre-nuptial are constantly being sought. One hears of the most unique and lovely affairs that are constantly being given.

At a recent gay little affair planned in honor of a June bride the table decorations were quite unique. A golden hoop was suspended over the table, the ribbons holding it, being of blue tied in a huge "true lover's" knot. From the hoop narrow blue ribbon went to each cover, where they were attached to tiny golden slippers filled with puffed rice. The favors for the girls were decidedly original, being emblems of the occupation of their future husbands—one was a little gift pillow for a physician's wife, a gilded pitchfork for a farmer's wife and a new penny for the wife of a millionaire, a pen for a journalist's wife and many quite as pretty conceits.

After the enjoyment of the dinner an original game was played, the mode for finding partners being novel and original. Padocks were cut out of pasteboard, the keyholes being of different sizes. The men were given golden keys and the padock which it fitted was claimed for the evening partner.

So many "showers" are being given for prospective brides that any new idea is gladly welcomed. A pretty idea brought to my attention the other day was that planned by the members of a sewing club, one of whom was to become a bride during the summer. Her friends wanted to give her a shower of some kind but she would have none of it. As the young lady in question does beautiful needlework, her club friends decided to fit up a workbasket for her. They purchased a beautiful basket and fitted it up with every known convenience. Cute little pockets were arranged on the sides for holding needles and eyes, rules of tape, threads of all numbers and sewing silks. A case of scissors, needle-book, emery, darning cotton in various shades, pins and stiletto, everything in fact, that one would need for sewing.

This seems such a practical gift and also such a necessary accessory that it makes a pretty mode of entertaining and may be done expensively or not, according to the pocketbooks of the donors.

During the coming week there will be several weddings solemnized. A wedding was rather a surprise was that of Miss Irene Gilman and MacMurchie attended at 10 o'clock on Monday morning at half past eleven o'clock. The young people first planned to celebrate on Tuesday, then changing it for today and finally settling upon Saturday, as the all-important day. The bride wore a pretty tan tailored gown and was attended by Miss Lillie Peterson. William MacMurchie attended his brother as best man. For some reason, best known to the young couple, the name of the officiating clergyman is to be kept a profound secret.

Mr. and Mrs. MacMurchie are leaving this afternoon for Los Angeles, where they will enjoy a honeymoon trip of two weeks. Upon their return they will make their home in Berkeley. The bride is the daughter of Professor and Mrs. C. L. Gilman of Dana street, Berkeley, and a very pretty and attractive girl.

CHARMING VISIT.

Miss Audrey Beer, the accomplished young pianist, is having the most delightful time in Santa Rosa, where she is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Baker at the Epworth rectory. There seems to be a continual procession of delightful affairs in which Miss Audrey is a happy participant. Mrs. Olive Beer will join her daughter early in July going up to attend a lawn party which will be given on the Fourth.

AFFAIR POSTPONED.

The dinner and musicale which Mrs. E. I. Bartholomew had planned for this afternoon has been postponed for one week, owing to the illness of George Kruger, who was to have been the special guest of honor. Mr. Kruger has recently come to the coast from Cincinnati and is a musician of both vocal and instrumental. It is due to the kindness of this lady that so many fine musical programs have been given before the members of the Oakland Club. Mr. Bartholomew is a most genial host and ably assisted his wife at her frequent delightful affairs.

Mrs. Bartholomew is an ideal hostess with a host of warm, sincere friends. She loves to gather her friends about her and entertain them at her hospitable home. Good music is always a feature at this matron's affairs, being a singer herself she has a large acquaintance among musicians. Mrs. Bartholomew is a graduate of the University of California and has also the advantage of European study.

ATTRACTIVE BRIDE.

Mr. L. A. Shells and family accompanied by H. C. Poole are enjoying a delightful vacation at Shasta Retreat.

AFTERNOON MUSICAL.

One of the most enjoyable happenings of last week was the musicale given by part of the younger pupils of Miss Clara MacLean at the beautiful home of Mrs. Roscoe P. Bromley on Thirty-fourth street. The spacious flower decked drawing room was filled with the guests and friends of the young musicians.

The program consisted of piano solos, duets and a trio illustrative of the sights, sounds and pleasures of a summer day, played with evident enjoyment of the musical contest.

Mrs. Fred Compton's rendering of Kate Vannab's "Cradle Song" gave much pleasure, and she responded to a hearty encore with "A Bowl of Roses."

Those taking part in the program were:

Miss Emilie Bromley	Miss Marion
Miss Marion Bromley	Miss Mildred

AT LOS BANOS.

Miss Blanche Hostetter is enjoying the June days in Los Banos, planning to return early next month to her home in East Oakland. The announcement of Miss Hostetter's engagement to Charles Jay Welch was of interest to a wide circle of friends. Although no definite date has been set for the wedding it will probably be an event of the autumn and will be solemnized at the Hostetter home in East Oakland.

RETURNED FROM ABROAD.

Mrs. Frank Moffitt, who has been enjoying an extended tour abroad, returned to Oakland where she is receiving a most cordial welcome from her friends. During her visit on the continent she was with friends in Paris a greater portion of the time. Several weeks were spent in New York before coming to the coast.

The friends of Miss Dorothy Taft are pleased to hear of her convalescence, the young Oakland girl having been seriously ill when the party of home folk reached Rome. H. C. Taft, with Miss Christie Taft and Miss Edith Scott, left Mrs. Taft and Miss Dorothy in Rome, under the physician's care, while they continued their travels. They are now touring northern Italy and southern France, not making any plans for an immediate return to California.

LOCAL EXHIBIT AT FAIR ATTRACTS WIDE ATTENTION

Leroy Smith and family returned yesterday afternoon from the Alaska-Yukon Exposition. Mr. and Mrs. Smith spent two weeks in Seattle, Mr. Smith, who has one of the Alameda county exhibits, stated last night that the exhibit of this county is one of the most attractive on the exposition grounds. Easterners, northerners and southerners, as well as the westerners, have words of praise for the Alameda county exhibition.

New Era of Prosperity.

Two old-time Oaklanders, the veteran citizen, C. H. King, one of the principal stockholders in the Bankers' Hotel project, and United States Sub-Treasurer William C. Ralston, the son-in-law of Colonel Grayson and a former Senator in the State Legislature from Alameda County, have just returned from a visit to the East. Mr. King has also made a tour of Europe. But the point of special interest which is pertinent at the present time to note is that both bring with them a report of the return of prosperity to the country and the complete passing of the financial depression which was so marked a feature of business conditions last year at home and abroad. Mr. King has been the most ardent of the projectors of the Bankers' Hotel, and he is enthusiastic over the assurance, which now exists of the carrying out of that important project, for he firmly believes that it is one of the enterprises essential to Oakland's future prosperity. No man realizes more fully than he does (and he has put up his money as evidence of his faith) that the carrying out of the hotel enterprise is essential to Oakland's future welfare. Fortunately, the project is in such a shape that it has been removed from the realm of doubt. But Mr. King's trip abroad has made him a more ardent Oaklander than ever and his observations of conditions in the East, like those of Sub-Treasurer Ralston, have been convincing of the return of prosperity to the country.

Mr. Ralston is firmly of the belief that the country at large is facing the most prosperous era during the next three years that it has ever witnessed. This opinion is not ultra optimistic. It is sustained by the past week's record of the New York bank clearings, which show the marvelous increase, as compared with corresponding week in 1908, when it had not recovered from the bankers and Wall Street speculators' panic of the previous October, of $65 per cent. And money, says Mr. Ralston, is cheap in New York today. Cheap money in New York relieves the strain in every other part of the country. This easy condition of the financial situation is largely due, of course, to the fact that the crops of staples produced in the United States are this year unusually large, while the prices prevailing in the foreign markets where they are needed are high and steady.

Oakland will, of course, profit from these conditions in common with the rest of the country. But Oakland has other interests nearer home which are working equally well to its advantage. Alameda County, which constitutes Oakland's back country, for instance, is unusually prosperous. Big crops of all kinds and good market prices and thriving industries yielding profitable returns, will pour into the county more money than its inhabitants have realized for many years. The surplus will naturally seek investment here. Moreover, the gold mines of Alaska, in which many Oaklanders are interested, are bringing out more of the precious metal this year than they ever have done before. From the one district of Tanana it is predicted that the yield of gold this summer will foot up from $14,000,000 to $15,000,000 which will, possibly, put Alaska this year at the head of the list of gold-producing subdivisions of the United States and its possessions. Does anyone think for a minute that Oakland will not be a beneficiary? Indeed, to the contrary, everything points to a summer of unprecedented prosperity to Oakland this year, when railroad developments and other important internal, as well as external, interests in which it is concerned are considered.

Accidents to Lock Canals.

The recent wrecking of the lock gates in the Canadian Canal at the rapids of the St. Mary's river by a blow received from a steamer working her way through it under her own steam has incidentally turned public attention toward the possibilities of such an accident occurring to the Panama Canal locks when that great work is opened to commerce. The Canadian Canal accident resulted in the blocking of the waterway by three badly damaged steamers making the passage, and the destruction of the gates has put the canal out of business for many months to come and will cost the Canadian government approximately $250,000 to make the necessary repairs. The experience of the Canadian lock canal is not new in the history of such artificial waterways. Accidents of a similar nature have occurred in the Manchester ship canal and others which have temporarily blocked navigation. But the Engineering News, in commenting on the incident and its relations to the Panama Canal, says: "By the introduction of powerful electric towing machinery, the movement of vessels in the locks will be subject to absolute control, and the chances of collision of the vessel with the lock walls or with the gates will be reduced almost to the vanishing point."

Speaking on the same subject, Colonel Goethals, the engineer in charge of the Panama Canal, says that a similar accident in the Panama Canal would be well nigh impossible, as in addition to the precautions taken for the towing of ships through it, guard gates are to be installed at the approaches to the main gates of the locks, which will protect them against possible collision with the bow of any vessel about to enter.

Magna Charta island, which contains the famous Runnymede and the table on which King John signed the document forced upon him by the barons, and which constitutes the basis of British liberty, is on the market for sale. It is one of the most historic spots in England and should be regarded by the whole Anglo-Saxon race as one of its most precious heirlooms.

The boom in the automobile business is ascending at a rapid rate as indicated by New York's revenues from registration during the past five months of the year, during which time the income from the registration of machines and chauffeurs amounted to over $53,000, which, as compared with the receipts of last year, showed an excess of $13,000.

Game Law Breeding Trouble.

The provision of the California games laws protecting the tree squirrel from extermination by the market hunter is sadly out of harmony with the reports of the rangers of the national forests located in sugar and yellow pine belt and the views entertained by the forestry bureau.

In the notice which the Fish and Game Commission has issued that the new hunting license law goes into effect on July 1st, the opening of the season for the lawful hunting of game birds and animals is appended. It describes that the season for the lawful slaughter of tree squirrels opens September 1st, but the right to kill by any one hunter has been limited to twelve in one season. The manifest purpose of putting the limit so low is to shut out the market hunter and reserve the squirrels for the guns of those gentry who hunt solely for sport. Of course, it is not worth any one's while to hunt for tree squirrels when the right to bag through an open period of three months is restricted to a paltry dozen and, as a result, the graceful little animals are multiplying so rapidly, say the forest rangers, that they are over-running the sugar and yellow pine forests and in gratification of their voracious appetites are consuming the crop of seeds of the best trees so completely that they are interfering materially with the work of reforestation. The only hope for the survival of the pine forests, in the judgment of the forest rangers and the Forestry Bureau, is in the extermination of the tree squirrels.

From this showing it is quite manifest that the policy of the Forestry Bureau and that of the game laws and the Commission upon whom rests the responsibility of enforcing them are at cross purposes.

The former insists that the squirrels shall be killed off to save the forests. The latter declare that the squirrel must be protected from slaughter in order to keep up the stock for the benefit of the members of the sportsmen's clubs. What would happen to the rangers employed on the national forests if they should begin under orders from Washington to proceed with an indiscriminate slaughter of the tree squirrels on the ground that they are pests whose extermination is necessary for the protection of the timber? Manifestly, there will be a clash sooner or later over the subject between the State Game Commission and the Forestry Bureau, in which probably the latter will set up the claim that the State game laws do not apply to the national reserves.

The Country's Crop Prospects.

According to the Agricultural Department's report the crop prospects of the country for June have not been as favorable as at present in ten years. Following is the comparative table which the department has issued:

Condition	1909.	1908.	1907.	average
June 1.
Winter wheat	80.7	85.0	77.4	80.5
Spring wheat	95.2	95.0	88.7	92.6
Oats	88.7	92.9	81.6	88.4
Rye	89.6	91.3	88.1	89.4
Barley	90.6	89.7	84.9	90.6

For everything except winter wheat, the grain industry of the country on the first of June was not only in fine condition, but the acreage of the spring sown wheat was 7 per cent higher than a year ago. The stock of grain harvested last year is, however, exhausted, but the department confidently assumes that this year's crop of wheat will be large enough to meet the needs of the country and leave a small surplus for export. The conditions of the market are such, in the department's opinion, nevertheless, that the prices of wheat and other grain are likely to rule high, which is good news to the producer, although it may not be welcome to consumers.

Passing of Civil War Veterans.

It is a pathetic story that United States Pension Agent Warren, who is making a business tour of the United States, relates, when he states that the veterans of the Civil War are dying off at the rate of twenty-five hundred per month and that the pension roll is dissolving at the rate of $175,000 per month as a consequence. But, however much it may be desired to prolong the lives of these heroes, it is in the order of nature that every one of them must in time cross the divide into that mysterious and "undiscovered country whence no traveler returns," and that the turn of the last survivor to pass away from this earthly existence cannot be very remote. Forty-four years have flown since the war ended and the youngest of the great host of the defenders of the Union and the honor of the flag has been grizzled by the passage of time and must soon answer the last roll-call.

When the Oakland Gas, Light and Heat Company is spending $120,000 for the laying of a new system of mains which will meet the necessities of a million inhabitants and hold good for at least a half century to come as an auxiliary to the large gas-producing and storage plant already installed, and when the local transportation companies are spending millions on the improvement of their facilities for the carrying of passengers, it ought to be accepted by the public generally as proof positive of the confidence of the public service corporations in the future growth and prosperity of Oakland.

The federation of South Africa is now assured, as the people of Natal, who are intensely British, have consented to it. The reluctance of that colony to give its consent to the unification of the South African colonies, was due to the fear of its people that the federation would be dominated by the Dutch inhabitants of Cape Colony, but they have finally yielded to the persuasions of English imperialists, and the inauguration of the federal government is said to be assured within a year.

The mosque of Eyoub, where Mohammed "V" has been invested with the sword of Osman, is sometimes termed "the Westminster Abbey of Turkey," for within its walls all save one or two of the long line of Ottoman Sultans have undergone the ceremony which corresponds to coronation. The mosque, though not large, is a magnificent example of Oriental architecture, built of white marble and decorated with Persian tiles. It stands amid lovely groves at the extremity of the Golden Horn, and derives its name from Eyoub, friend and standardbearer of the Prophet, who was killed at the first siege of Constantinople, and whose burial place the mosque is said to cover. It is esteemed the holiest Mussulman temple in Europe, and remains to this day untrod by non-Moslem feet.

The students of the University of Chicago have decided to put to the subject of whether or not the honor system shall govern all examinations to popular vote. All indications point toward the adoption of the plan by a large majority. The proposed scheme is that each student shall be placed on his honor while an examination is in progress, and shall conduct himself during the work as he thinks right. A clause has been inserted in the constitution that any student seeing another student in the act of "cribbing" or doing anything which the faculty had declared to be illegal in examinations should immediately report the act to the dean of the junior college. The sentiment of the students was so manifestly against this clause, however, that it was stricken out.

The Rev. Dr. Henry A. Baill, a leading Baptist clergyman of Philadelphia, at a meeting of the ministers of the denomination a day or two ago, threw a bombshell when he declared that many hymns used in Baptist churches were "only doggerel," and that greater care in choosing sacred music should be exercised. He added that he deemed good music essential to a service, and that it often did more good than responsive reading, which, he said, was frequently resorted to to fill in time.

In preparation for the Catholic Congress of Missionaries, to be held at the Apostolic Mission House, in Washington, statisticians at that house of studies have been gathering figures of converts received into the Catholic Church in this country. They report that the records show that in 1883 the number received into the Church totaled 28,743. These figures, received from the reports of the clergy, represent the aggregate of adult baptisms in all the dioceses of this country. In 1905, in preparation for the Congress of Missionaries held that year, there were found to be 25,055 converts.

DANGEROUS TO AUTOS

Ballast Laid on Oakland Traction Tracks Should Be Rolled

EDITOR TRIBUNE: I beg to call attention to the manner in which the Oakland Traction Company is ballasting its tracks on macadamized street. The ballast consists of sharp, rough rock, which, after being laid, is not rolled as it should be. In its present condition, the sharp rocks in the ballast is doing enormous damage to the tires of automobiles, ripping and puncturing them whenever a crossing of the tracks from one side of the street to the other is attempted. The Superintendent of Streets and the Board of Public Works should instruct that Superintendent W. F. Kelly roll the ballast after it is laid so that automobiles can cross the roadbed in safety. It is a public outrage to leave the roadbed of the company's tracks in their present condition.

As Two Actresses View Morality

More Than One Kind, Says Olga Nethersole

"Formerly it was supposed that women could be 'good' in only one sense. That signified woman's integrity as to sex. Men were good according to whether they were kind, generous, just, honest, faithful in their relations with all the world. We are emerging to such a conception for women. And that makes it possible for us to define a moral play on other grounds than those of sex.

"A moral play is one in which the community problem is made to supersede the individual problem. Of course this does not take into consideration the plays produced merely as a matter of relaxation and for momentary enjoyment, which quite legitimately deal with no problem at all.

"Today the community problem is paramount. We have grown to that in the last few years. All the characters I am best known in, including Paula Tanqueray, Camille, &c., really lead up to the community play. I have been trying to show by my acting that there are not two classes of humanity, one good and the other bad. There is only one class. That class can be both good and bad—and inherited tendencies and environment are going to decide whether mostly good or mostly bad.

"Present day production of all the necessities of life enables us to control in greater measure than was ever dreamed of before the inherited tendencies and environment of people. That, you see, means their goodness and their badness. Modern machinery has taught us how to make all that the whole world needs of clothing, food and shelter. Only we haven't learned yet how to give the workers of the world the very things they produce in such plenty. That is the problem of today. Everything else is insignificant. This is in its finality the problem of both environment and heredity. For heredity is the result of parent's

Poverty Base of Degeneracy, Says Mary Shaw

"I would not under any conditions take part in an immoral play. Perhaps the most immoral play now on the stage, and I have said this personally to the author, is 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.' It teaches contentment with and resignation to poverty. There is no more potent factor toward the degeneration and general devitalization of the race than poverty. To teach people by the drama that poverty is right, that it enables, is immoral.

"Mrs. Wiggs sits up all night with a child sick with typhoid fever, and only says in optimistic patience how much worse it would have been if all four of her children had had it. Any woman with a sick child should have a trained nurse to help her nurse it. Any woman with a sick child should have the most hygienic surroundings and elaborate antiseptic precautions that science has developed if she expects to save that child's life. Sunshine and fresh air, quantities of clean linen, fresh hot and cold water, are the foundation requirements. The rich have all that in illness. To imply by dramatic teaching that there is any justice in denying them to one class and giving them to another is immoral. They are the things which belong as a matter of course with this age. They environment. It comes to this—to settle the individual problem you must first settle the community problem.

"I have myself been in the slums of New York City. I have gone to Trinity-owned tenements and seen conditions there. The room described by the character I portray in 'The Writing on the Wall' I saw myself and furnished to Mr. Hurbit all the details for the play.

"Think of a room where a mother worked at baby robes which rich people later were to buy. She was surrounded by her own three children, whimpering and crying and longing for a little childish joy. At every effort on their part to laugh or talk or prattle they were warned by a 'Hush, children, hush,' from the mother. For four men slept at one end of the room on the bare floor, and unless the children kept still so that the men were not disturbed, they would not come to sleep here the next day and the woman would lose the five cents paid by each man for the sleeping privilege. The men worked at night, but were too poorly paid to get any better lodgings than these. The room, of course, abounded in disease germs. There were seven thicknesses of paper on the walls. Two many children of the rich who bought the baby robes on which the mother was working were infected with tuberculosis, scarlet fever, diphtheria, typhoid, &c., because those robes were made under such horrible conditions no one will ever know. But some day the rich will waken to the fact that they must, for their own lives' sake, see to it that no man or woman ever has to work in anything but sanitary surroundings where everything is done to save the health and strength of the worker.

"We tried for ages to make the rich see that their duty demanded attention to the way the 'other half' lived. It did little good. But today we can prove to them that their health demands it. And that is going to make them wake up."—New York World.

DOCTORS - - - By Bernard Shaw

The doctor is forced by competition to be a tradesman who sells "cures" for what he can get. The average doctor is as appealingly and humbly poor. He is consequently a dangerous man. He dare not be scientifically honest with his patients, who would change their doctors if he ventured to tell them the truth, and show them their ignorance.

But a doctor is as honest as he can afford to be. The doctor shows much skill in adapting himself to the delusions of the patient, and as soon as he gets into general practice unlearns much of the hygiene which his hospital training has taught him. On a wholly scientific plane the doctor does surprisingly well. It is thoroughly wrong that a doctor's income should be reduced by his own efficiency, and that by the advances of preventive science many doctors should be ruined. A bishop is not expected to blow his church organ, but a doctor is expected to do any trumpery work, however great his skill.

Under the competitive system men of transcendent ability waste their time on trivialities, and others are called upon to undertake work which is beyond them.

The "socialization" of the profession would remedy this. Socialism, as a profession, has already made strides, as is shown by the ever-growing number of medical men in the public service. Socialism would give every medical man the alternative of working honorably in the public, independent of the quackery which the demands of patients almost impose on private practitioners.

Tongus' Peculiarities

Some remarkable facts regarding the tongue have been recently presented by the eminent surgeon, Dr. E. Souchoin of New Orleans. The doctor, after stating that the tongue, the nose, and the skin are the only organs of special sense which perform other functions, remarks that the tongue is the only organ except the heart which presents a base, a body, and an apex, is the only organ which can be protruded out of the cavity in which it is contained, and that no other organ can assume such a variety of shapes or be so movable.

Its papillae, though similar to those of other mucous membranes, are larger and more specially developed, and those in the anterior two-thirds differ from those in the posterior third. The tongue presents a dual structure in accordance with its dual functions, motor and sensory, varies in color more than any other organ, and is more solid than any other viscus. It is the only organ presenting the three kinds of nerve, namely, a nerve of special sense, one of ordinary sensation, and one of motion.—Lealle's Weekly.

How Submarine Dives

All submarine vessels are brought to a condition of readiness to submerge by taking in water ballast in suitably arranged and controlled tanks. This causes more the boat to sink below the water's surface, and finally leaves her with only a small part of her conning tower out of water.

The remaining part above water represents what is called "reserve buoyancy."

This buoyancy varies generally from two hundred to a thousand pounds, depending upon the size of the craft; and it is to overcome the permanent tendency to rise represented by this reserve that pressure is brought to bear upon the submerged rudders or the hydroplanes in order to make the boat sink after she is once put in motion.

It is the height out of water or reserve of buoyancy of the submarine which gives her her superior sea-keeping qualities, which permit the vessel to be driven safely on the surface at higher rates of speed and which contributes in other ways to the efficiency, the habitability and the military value of the craft.—Harper's Weekly.

William Lorimer Takes the Oath As U. S. Senator

WILLIAM LORIMER.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—William Lorimer of Illinois took the oath of office and became a United States Senator yesterday. Although elected several weeks ago he retained his seat in the House of Representatives until satisfied that he could render better service in the Senate. He is expected to join the "progressive" Senators.

Lorimer was born in England April 27, 1861. When five years old he emigrated with his parents to the United States, and in 1870 the family located in Chicago, where young Lorimer received a public school education. His father died soon after and at the age of 12 William went to work as a sign painter's assistant to aid in the support of the family. He continued in various trades until 1886, when he became a real estate agent, later entering the contracting business. At about the same time he became prominent in Chicago politics as an active Republican and soon was one of the recognized party leaders in that city.

One of his first public positions was that of superintendent of the water department. In 1885 he was elected to Congress and continued to serve until 1901, when a political landslide swept him to defeat. Two years later, however, he was again returned to Congress and since then he has been twice re-elected.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Singing societies from all over the country are pouring into this city to participate in the National Saengerfest, which opens tomorrow at Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the United Singers of New York.

Competitive Singing. A concert was given tonight by the United Singers of New York and tomorrow afternoon the children's concert will be given, when more than 3000 school children will be on the stage.

Competitive singing contests will be held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, when the festival ends, and at 7 o'clock that evening the results of the competitions will be announced and the victors crowned.

Interest is added to the affair by the presence of a number of foreign musicians and singers who will take part as soloists.

NAVAL BOARD REDUCES OFFICERS' RETIREMENT LIST

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The number of naval officers who must be selected in accordance with law for compulsory retirement at the end of this fiscal year has been reduced since the elimination of five rear admirals, appointed to select these officers, held its preliminary meeting early this month.

At that time seventeen vacancies were required to make up the necessary forty. Since that time the number was increased to twenty by the opinion of the attorney general regarding these retirements under the thirty-year service law.

It has been reduced to eighteen by the death of Captain Samuel A. B. Diehl, and the resignation of a senior Lieutenant.

Connors lost his balance and was half around the waist and pulled him back into the boat. A twenty-two pound pike, the second largest caught this season, rewarded Bryan's piscatorial efforts.

MY CONFERENCE ON OFFICE SEEKERS

Conference of Business and Professional Men Likely to Take Place

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The much whispered Citizens' Committee, which it was said, would be appointed to act as a steering committee for the Republican party in San Francisco is still in the air. It has been on the verge of appointment, or selection, at various times during the past two weeks, but it is now said that it will not be born until the middle of this week and possibly may not come into being at all. There is a chance of the committee and other embarrasments of the local republican organization working themselves out satisfactorily, so that there will be no necessity for the citizen body taking the helm and steering the craft away from the rocks and shoals for which it is appointed to be headed. It would not come as a surprise, however, should some of the leading citizens call together at an early date, 100 or 200 of the business and professional men to make suggestions in relation to candidates to be presented to the electors at the primary of August 17.

WELSH FALLS OFF POLITICAL FENCE

Hits With Considerable of a Thud, But Promptly Climbs Astraddle Again

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The game of politics has its diversions as well as its serious aspects. Not the least amusing of recent incidents in the local play of small statesmanship is the scramble of Senator Dick Welsh to resume his straddle of the fence from which place of vantage he fell two weeks ago, in a moment of inadvertence, on the wrong side, tumbling with all his political baggage into the camp of the rump republican county committee. At that time Dick delivered his two members of the local governing body, Dolan of the waterfront, and the Senator's brother, Jack, to the bolters' division. At a meeting of the rump faction last week Dick proved that he was himself again and riding the top rail of the political fence with his normal straddle. On this latter occasion Welsh withdrew his brother from the support of the bolters only turning in to Dolan to serve as the Welsh contribution to the effort to divide the local republican party. Mademoiselle Galsiello the celebrated equestrienne, never made two rein-backed circus chargers with greater skill and grace than Welsh can straddle two political factions, but even Gabrielle would slip and fall to the sawdust occasionally—and so does Dick.

Talks on Teeth

Loose Teeth

The most dreaded disease of the dental profession is Alveolar Pyorrhea, commonly known as Riggs' Disease.

In such cases the gums become congested, recede from the teeth, causing them to become loose and in time to fall out.

Most dentists, in fact, we might say ALL dentists, throw up their hands when such a case comes before them and declare there is no remedy for the "loose tooth" victim.

They can only suggest the "pulling" cure, and as a consequence many an unfortunate is wearing a whole or partial plate today by reason of such ignorant advice.

It seems a pity. Teeth perfectly sound—just LOOSE. We CURE SUCH CASES AND GUARANTEE THE WORK.

When we make this statement we are fully aware that almost every other dentist in town will want to argue the question with us and enter a firm denial that Riggs' Disease can be cured.

Why not? Simply because they have tried and failed.

That won't do for an answer. If YOU have some loose teeth, and want a practical demonstration of our ability to cure the cause and make the gums strong and healthy again, it is only a short trip to our office in the Bacon Building, Twelfth and Washington streets.

It will be an easy matter to make us "fish or cut bait." The examination is absolutely free.

A few years ago Marconi came before the world and said he could send messages through the air without the aid of wires.

Every telegraph operator in the land said, "Nonsense, it can't be done." But Marconi did it, and is doing it today.

We shall go a step further and make a broader claim for our method of curing loose teeth.

If you have two or more teeth in either jaw, whether tight or loose, we will not only tighten the loose ones, but will build teeth around them and give you a full set that will look, feel and to all intents and for all purposes be the same as those that nature gave you. WITHOUT USING A PLATE.

With these teeth you will be able to chew beefsteak or anything else you care to eat, and get all the enjoyment you used to get when you had all your natural teeth.

Now, if this statement is true it is remarkable.

Such a thing had never been attempted before we patented the process. It is so remarkable that we are not surprised sometimes at the doubting Thomases who come here and demand proof before they will have the work done. We are glad to give you that PROOF.

Don't we beg of you, don't allow a single loose tooth to be pulled without first letting us look at it.

Save your teeth.

We will help you.

Send for our book, "Alveolar Dentistry," which goes into details. It is FREE. But where possible, come to our offices and let us look your teeth over. This is free, too.

ADVISED TO SPEND BAD MEN HELD FOR MANY JOBS

Union Labor Is Shown the Necessity of Patronizing Home Industries

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The San Francisco Labor Council today received a letter from a local manufacturer thanking the delegates for their assistance in securing from the city a contract to furnish municipal uniforms with certain supplies. The council is gratified at its interest in behalf of home manufactures and a wish is given for cordial cooperation in the future between the wage-earners and local manufacturers for the promotion of home products, thereby increasing the prosperity of the community and its people. The co-operation of the trades-unions is asked to conduct a home-industry campaign during the Portola fair in October, when San Franciscans may show the work that is made in the city and invite patronage for the home products.

Retail Clerks' District Council No. 3 directed attention to the fact that a number of unions have contracted with Eastern concerns for uniforms for Labor Day, and suggested that action be taken to foster home industry as much as possible in securing uniforms for the city. Secretary Gallagher was instructed to direct attention of the unions to the necessity of patronizing local firms, thereby giving employment to home wage-earners.

Strike Victories

The council has received a communication from the United Hatters' Association giving information of the victory over eastern of the Eastern manufacturers that had been fighting the organization for five months. These employers, it is said, not only agreed to sign the union agreement, but withdrew from the manufacturers' association. Secretary Lawlor stated that the hatters will press the strike against the other six unfair manufacturers until they also yield to the union.

In a communication the Unemployed Co-Operate League asked for endorsement of its cash check system, stating that the proceeds would be used in making the unemployed self-supporting on farms. Favorable action was taken and unionists were requested to patronize firms using the checks.

Labor Day Plans

Secretary Andrew J. Gallagher submitted a report of the Labor Day committee and the nation of the Building Trades Council in voting for a joint parade and celebration. Chairman Kelly was elected to appoint twenty-two additional delegates to the joint committee, taking sixty-seven representatives that the Labor Council will have in attendance in the arrangements of the celebration. The chairman said he would announce his selections next Friday.

A letter was received from Estelle Carpenter, supervisor of music of the school department, giving notice of the intention to have the children of the city sing at the Stadium on July 5. The co-operation of the council was requested. Secretary Gallagher was instructed to inform all affiliated unions and request them to extend an invitation to their members and families to attend the celebration.

Paper Carriers Barred

A communication from Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor stated that there are objections to issuing a charter to the newspaper carriers' union. One reason is that members of that organization are employed owners routes and hiring boys to do the work. Another objection is that the owners of local newspapers require the carriers to help in the mailing rooms, the carriers thus coming into conflict with union mailers, who are affiliated with the International Typographical Union. The latter would protest if the carriers were chartered under their present conditions. The matter, it was said, has been referred to the executive council of the federation for further consideration.

Elections of Officers

Millwrights' Union No. 766, has chosen the following officers: President, G. W. Martin; vice president, F. L. Luce; recording secretary, George P. Dorgan; financial secretary, H. E. Spaulding; treasurer, J. H. Hanly; trustees, George Berkshire, G. W. Fletcher and W. H. Pratt; delegates to the Building Trades' Council and District Council of Carpenters, H. E. Spaulding and W. H. Van Horn.

Grocery Clerks' Union No. 648, has elected the following officers: President, Charles Brown; vice president, A. E. Blennan; secretary, A. H. Warfield; financial secretary and treasurer, O. Henry; corresponding secretary, W. R. Cammack; guide, J. Lalor; guard, H. Opetz; organizer, R. T. Gamble; trustees, P. E. Ritzner, R. T. Gamble and W. Watson; delegate to Labor Council, W. R. San Francisco, June 19.—The arrest of the commission of a number of daring crimes on both sides of the San Francisco bay, are confined in the city prison in San Francisco. Beneath a house occupied by the two men in San Francisco, a quantity of plunder stolen from the grocery store of Sousa Bros. at Fitchburg, from which a wagon-load of goods was taken a week ago last Thursday night, has been unearthed, together with incriminating evidence of other robberies and burglaries.

Just a week ago French and Ayhns were taken into custody. This indicates that the goods stolen from the store of Sousa Bros. must have been taken to San Francisco a week ago yesterday.

Held as Safe-Crackers

In connection with the arrests the officers of the treasury section were looking for the perpetrators of a daring safe-blowing on the waterfront of Berkeley, and Detective M. B. Burke of the San Francisco police encountered French and Ayhns while they were robbing a safe.

He arrested them as suspicious characters.

The prisoners were taken before the watchman at the West Berkeley factory had been robbed, but he could not positively identify them as the men he had seen loitering about the premises and knocking him down and gagged him and then took their own time about rifling and blowing open the safe in the office, although he declared they bore a general resemblance to the outlaws.

In spite of this disappointment, however, the San Francisco authorities held the men and began investigation of their recent movements, on the theory that they were crooks and as such had too much money to have come by legitimately. The disclosure at the house of the men were the result.

Both Are Bad Men

According to the authorities, French has served at least two penitentiary terms and Ayhns has been arrested many times, but has heretofore always managed to get off with no punishment more severe than sentences in the county jail. It is claimed for him that he is a "rummy thief" and a great deal of his trouble with the police has been due to his straggling hides. He was suspected of being one of the bad gang which, during a fight with the night watchman of the Eagle tannery, in San Francisco, murdered a man. Conclusive evidence, however, as to his connection with this crime has not yet been secured by the authorities.

The San Francisco detectives detailed on the case, Deputy Sheriff Kelly and Officer of Alameda county, and Detective Cliney, from the Oakland Police Department, who have been co-operating in the investigation of French and Ayhns, have considerable work yet to do before they make their report.

They have gone over the ground of a number of recent crimes and are comparing property found on the persons of the prisoners or in their shack with that which has been stolen at different times and in various places.

Charged With Burglary

The San Francisco authorities are holding the prisoners for the burglary of a store in the city. It is said that the store stolen from the store was found in their possession and included some old clothes, a pair of eyeglasses and a purse. The man will be prosecuted on this charge, the robbery of the Sousa store being held over them in the event that a conviction is not secured in connection with the San Francisco robbery.

WAGE AGREEMENT IS NOT RENEWED

Restaurant Keepers Wish to Lower Scale in Class B and C Houses

The limit to the agreement on the matter of wages between the Hotel and Restaurant Men's Association and the Cooks and Waiters' Union has expired without renewal, but both organizations are still working under the agreement which has been in force for the past year.

There is still, however, a certain question to be adjusted and it is not thought that it will be settled until the next meeting of the Restaurant and Hotel Men's organization.

Several weeks ago, when the time for entering upon an agreement as to wages to be paid to cooks and waiters by the restaurant and hotel men, arrived, the cooks presented to the restaurant and hotel men the same schedule of wages which was agreed to by the latter for the past year.

Want Wage Reduction

The schedule, however, was not adopted by the restaurant and hotel men for the reason that they desired to have a reduction in the wages of the waiters in the restaurants known as Classes B and C. It is understood that the reduction was practically a dollar a week both for men and women, or, in other words, from ten to nine dollars per week.

The Clerks and Waiters' Union held a special meeting on the question and submitted another schedule to the restaurant men, but since that submission, the restaurant men have not held a meeting, and, as a consequence, no settlement of the dispute has been reached.

There is an impression that the dispute will be settled in a manner which will be satisfactory to both parties.

SAW HAYMARKET ANARCHISTS HUNG

Deputy Sheriff Who Assisted Executions Dies Suddenly in Iowa

CHICAGO, June 19.—One more report of sudden death of one of the men connected with the trial and execution of the Haymarket rioters has been announced. D. W. Nickerson, who was a deputy-sheriff here at the time of the execution of the anarchists, is dead of apoplexy in Mason City, Iowa, in the county where both Sheriff S. F. Hancock and Chief Clerk W. H. Gleason, connected with the anarchists' case, died of the same complaint.

Reports from Mason City state that Nickerson sprung the trap the execution of the anarchists, but it is always understood that a man named John Harper was the chief agent of the actual hanging.

IS TUBERCULOSIS BLOOD DISEASE?

New York Specialist Says So and Scoffs at Prevailing Treatment

CHICAGO, June 19.—The declaration of Dr. Robert Lincoln Watkins, professor of nasematology of the New York Medical College, that tuberculosis is a disease of the blood and can be cured, and is not infectious or contagious, created a spirited discussion at the closing session of the annual national convention of the American Electric Medical Association here, several members taking issue with the assertion.

"The disease develops inside the body," said Dr. Watkins. "If it is infectious, show me the period of incubation. How will sanitation and fresh air stamp it out when internal sanitation is neglected? Fresh air is all right and has been for more than 2000 years, but people are still dying from tuberculosis and having plenty of fresh air."

FORMAL DEMAND FOR BACK SALARY

Langdon Asks Court To Compel Payment of Burns'
April Accounts

SAN FRANCISCO June 19.—District Attorney William H. Langdon will apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus compelling Auditor John A. Koster to pay the April salaries of Detective William J. Burns and his corps of assistant special agents following the refusal of Superior Judge Stewart to dismiss the matter yesterday. This step it is claimed will settle the issue and determine whether Burns and his men have a legal right to their salaries. Assistant District Attorney Cook for Langdon moved for the dismissal of the application of a writ of mandamus yesterday and although the motion was granted the court later reconsidered the decision and revoked the dismissal order. At the same time the suit of intervention begun by John L. Hughes was thrown out of court.

The final decision handed down by Judge Stewart means that Burns and his special agents must present their salary claims to the board of supervisors for approval each month and after approval is obtained the auditor may pass on them as the claims are legal charges against the county.

By consent the application for an injunction restraining the auditor from paying the salary of Assistant District Attorney Robert Harrison was dismissed. The application in this case was never pressed by the attorneys for Hughes the taxpayer who brought the suit.

White Goods Week At Kahns'

Several Thousand Pieces—Thousands Upon Thousands of Yards—of this Season's Most Wanted White Fabrics at Remarkably Low Special Prices

Calculations frequently go awry—sagacity often strikes a snag. The manufacturers of these goods planned for an unusually busy season. Mills were run to their utmost capacity—looms were kept humming day and night—warehouses were stored with immense quantities of goods in anticipation of a great demand. But for some reason or other—possibly because of the cool, unseasonable weather last spring—merchants bought cautiously—sparingly. This played havoc with the expectations of the manufacturers, and left them with large unsold stocks that they were eager to dispose of. Knowing the great outlet of The Always Busy Store several of them came to us to help them out of their predicament. Confident that you would welcome and appreciate an opportunity to make such splendid savings, we bought liberally—enormously, in fact. Sale starts tomorrow morning—just as soon as the store opens. USE OF NEW HIGH-GRADE

PIANO FREE

This opportunity is not open to any transient party who is wanting a piano just for a time and who may want to force the instrument back on us before we are able to give it a place in our new store.

There are only a few left out of more than 200. Over 115 have been put out in the last two weeks. This extraordinary opportunity to get the use of an instrument absolutely free until we are permanently located in our new quarters at 1214 Clay street is almost at an end, and we still have a few brand new instruments to select from in a number of different makes. Of course, if you prefer to rent an instrument year in and year out we will give you the lowest possible rates lower now than you could get them anywhere else, as we must find room for every piano we have in stock. We have Grand, Player Pianos and new Uprights, as well as used instruments to select from. The reason of this extraordinary offer is that this landlord of the premises at the expiration of the lease doubled our rent in the middle of the vacation season, and the Helme Piano Company at no time will pay what they consider an unfair rent, as it is not possible to treat the public squarely if you are paying more rent than the population warrants. The great success of this company has been that they have always insisted upon all their branches paying a fair rent. If you want to buy an instrument on easy terms, we will give you the same price as spot cash. We are making such a reduction on used pianos that you could not help but be tempted, and all we want is to get a place to put our instruments so that we will not have to store them for the time we will be getting our new warehouses ready. Don't put this off. Before the end of the week your opportunity will be over. Helme Piano Company, 536 Twelfth street, corner Clay street. Open evening.

TRADING IN REALTY BRISK

Marked Change Is Noted in Market During Past Week; Railway Improvements Advancing Values

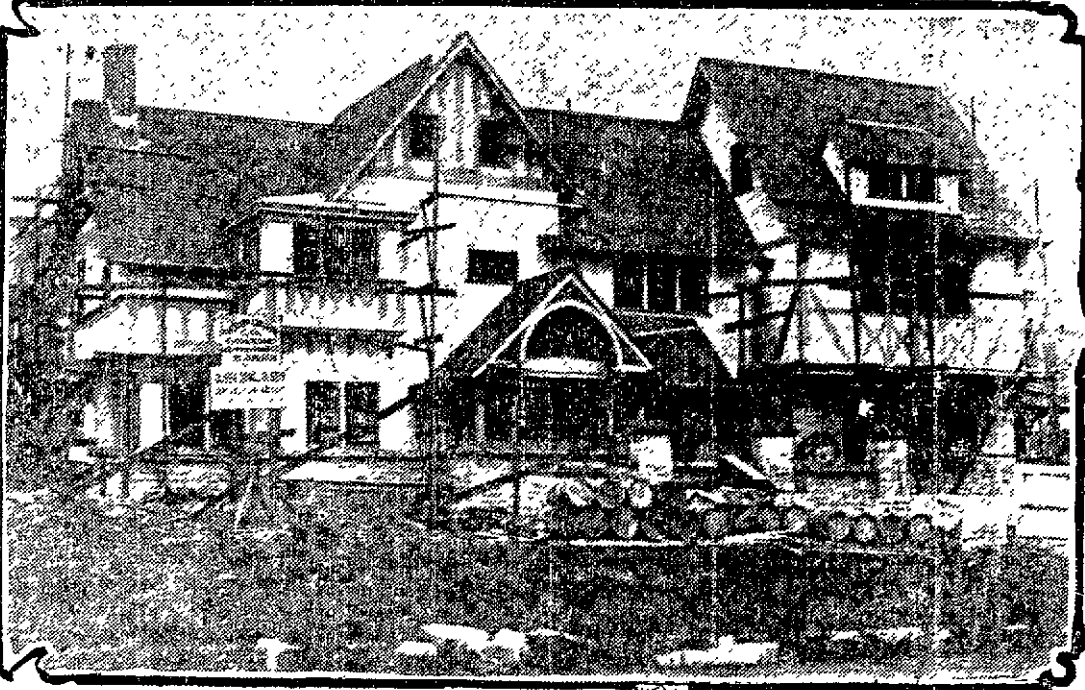

Real estate agents report a steady improvement in the market, a greater desire on the part of those having money to invest in Oakland realty. More sales are reported to have been made during the past week than during any corresponding period for months past. What is of more importance, while there has been some trading in property, most of the sales have been for spot cash. The properties that have changed hands have been medium-class but have brought good prices. "Money is beginning to show itself freely now," is the way one prominent realty man put the case—"more freely, indeed, than we have seen it for a long time past." Those who have

The inference is a natural one that the same corporation is planning to build an electric line along Forty-fifth street to Piedmont as a part of the new electric railway system it is developing. The construction of such a railroad will mean, of course, the invasion of territory now occupied exclusively by the Key Route and the Oakland Traction Company.

Transfer Third St. Lots

During the past week the Western Pacific Company filed for record a long list of deeds from the Standard Realty and Development Company to itself for property along the north side of Third street. The Standard Realty and Development Company is the holding company for the Western Pacific. The lots transferred are those on which improvements are now being made for the use of the new railroad which is expected to be in active operation at the end of July or the early part of August. It is indeed expected that the road will be in condition for through traffic from Salt Lake by some time in September.

Movement on Forty-fifth St.

An interesting movement in realty along the line of Forty-fifth street during the last few days has attracted the attention of keen-eyed realty operators. BIGGEST REALTY SALE OF THE WEEK

Twenty-five Thousand Dollars Paid for Eighth and Madison Street Flats

The largest real estate deal of the past week is that which has already been noted in THE TRIBUNE, as having been negotiated by the Alden Real Estate Company of this city and L. H. Gilmore of San Francisco. The deal includes property on both sides of the bay, and a total sum of $40,000, $25,000 of which is represented by the price paid for six flats located at the corner of Eighth and Madison streets. The remaining $15,000 was for two residences and lots located on Day street and Richmond avenue, San Francisco. The buyer in both cases was Attorney George D. Shadburne of San Francisco.

PERMIT FOR NEW BANK BUILDING

Contract Awarded for the Farmers' and Merchants' Savings Bank

During the week a permit for the erection of the handsome new bank building, which will house the Farmers and Merchants Savings Bank on and after January 1, 1910, was granted by the Board of Public Works. The contract calls for over $31,000, but when the building will be ready for occupation it is expected that the improvement will involve the expenditure of at least $100,000. Except in the single instance of the Bank of California in San Francisco, it will be the most imposing strictly banking building west of Chicago. It will be devoted exclusively to the uses of the bank and its officers and in that respect will be an innovation in the bank buildings of Oakland, all of which are now located in office buildings. Being

To Be Built on Fruitvale Ave. Near Dimond and to Cost $6000

The plans for a new two-story residence for George H. Center to be erected on Fruitvale avenue near Dimond, have just been completed by Architect T. D. Newsom. It will contain seven rooms and will be an attractive structure externally and finished in the interior in the latest style, with hard wood floors and beam ceilings. It will cost approximately $6000. located on the southeast corner of Franklin and Thirteenth streets, with its main entrance on the former, it will have a decided influence in the future of that thoroughfare, which is developing rapidly into one of the main streets in the central business center of the city.

BUILDING IS BRISK
IN COLLEGE TOWN

Rushing Bank Building Extension and the Erection of Shattuck Ave. Hotel

BERKELEY, June 19.—The assurance of the resumption of work on the beautiful Claremont hotel, the process of work on over a dozen large buildings to be used as stores and apartment houses, and the application made at the building inspector's office for a large number of permits to build homes in the foothill district of Berkeley, mark the progress of building in Berkeley this week. It is reported by realty dealers that a marked increase in the amount of building and the number of sales of land and houses is noticeable during the past few weeks.

Connor Apartment House

Work is progressing on the construction of a large apartment house being erected by F. J. Connor, on Durant avenue, near Telegraph. The house, finishing is now being carried on and it is reported that the new building, which is an up-to-date structure with all of the modern improvements, will be ready for occupancy in the course of a few weeks.

Piedmont Ave. Improvement

L. M. Moore has commenced work on another beautiful residence in the Piedmont avenue district. The new home is being erected at the corner of Piedmont avenue and Dwyer street and will be a two-story building, containing ten rooms. The building will aggregate a cost of $1500 and is of artistic design.

Claremont Hotel

The contractors in charge of the work on the new Claremont hotel have completed the exterior of the building and the interior of the structure. It is expected by the hotel company that the beautiful new hotel will be ready for occupancy not later than Christmas, plans having been made for an elaborate opening at that time.

Home Telephone Building

The new building of the Home Telephone company at the corner of Alameda street and Alameda way is now in the last stages of completion. The structure is an absolutely fire-proof building and is modern in style and design. The company expects to occupy the new quarters within the course of the next two weeks.

Bank and Hotel

The contract for the metal furnishings and grill work of the new $50,000 addition to the First National Bank building on Center street was let recently. The work on the foundation is completed and the superstructure has been commenced. The lower of the two new vaults is under way. The walls are two feet thick and will be of reinforced concrete and railroad iron.

The grading for the new hotel of the Shattuck estate on the corner of Shattuck avenue and Alameda way has been completed and work has been commenced on the construction of the five-story hotel, which will be the only one of its kind in the main business section of Berkeley.

New Businesses

A modern three-story building with flats is to be erected at the southeast corner of Grove street and University avenue, work having been already commenced on the grading for the foundation. The building will aggregate a cost of $12,000 and will be owned by W. B. Heywood of 1041 Walnut street.

Group of Five-room Cottages to Be Erected for W. C. Price on East Twenty-third Street, Between Seventeenth and Nineteenth Avenues, Costing $9000. T. D. Newsom, Architect.

SIX COTTAGES ON EAST TWENTY-THIRD ST.

Will Be Erected Between Seventeenth and Nineteenth Aves. at a Cost of $9000

W. C. Price is about to have erected for him on East Twenty-third street, between Seventeenth and Nineteenth avenues, six cottages of five rooms each, on plans drawn by Architect T. D. Newsom. They will be finished in slash grained pine and stained in an imitation of different woods. The mantels are to be built of pinker brick and rough stone. These cottages are designed to be ideally cozy and comfortable, the total cost of the group, some of which are shown in today's illustrations, will be $9000.

ACTIVITY IN REGENTS' PARK, BERKELEY

Newell-Hendricks, Inc., report a big week, particularly in Regents Park No. 8, where twenty lots were sold last Sunday and a large number during the week. The Main Street electric ferry line extension of the Southern Pacific is doubtless responsible for the surprising activity in these tracts as Regents Park Numbers 4, 6 and 8 adjoin Main street on the north and south.

Building Permits

Additions and repairs at 2515 Woolsey street; J. E. Shafer, owner. Cost, $900.
Repairs at Edith street and Cedar; Mrs. W. Hudson, owner. Cost, $150.
Two-story, 16-room dwelling at College and Parker streets; Wm. H. Lozier, owner. Cost, $3000.

ACTIVITY IN LEASE AND RENT PROPERTY

The renting conditions of a city are of vital interest to all, from the mechanic who rents a $20 cottage to the merchant who pays $1000 for a Broadway corner. F. B. Malden, manager of the Renting Department of Laymance Real Estate Company, reports the market brisk in renting and a shortage of rentable properties in some lines. They have twenty to thirty calls a day for modern cottages, not too far out, of four to six rooms, which would rent from $20 to $30 and are forced to turn away a great many applicants. There is also a great demand for modern bungalows which are practically not to be had. Although this class of property does not bring in so much income, it brings permanent and high class tenants who often pay after renting. Mr. Malden thinks many owners would do well to turn their thoughts towards filling the demand for cottages and bungalows. One instance of this is the fact that four cottages given in our charge, in not the best location, were rented before completion.

An interesting feature one day this week was that we concluded the renting and leasing of nine properties and upon investigating the references which we always require from new tenants, it was very satisfactory to know that seven of the nine were from outside of Oakland, four from different sections of the State, one from the east, two from San Francisco, and two from Oakland, the latter two changing from older occupancies to more modern properties.

For H. M. Starbom, two story dwelling on Telegraph and Thirty-second street, one year's lease.
For Cutting Packing Packing Company, cottage on Edwards street, near Telegraph avenue, one year's lease.
For O. M. Bullock, four room apartment at No. 52 Vernon street, one year's lease.
For Mrs. K. Gilbert, ten room dwelling, Webster street, near Fourteenth street, one year's lease.
For Knights of Pythias, store room, No. 227 Twelfth street, one year's lease.
For E. A. Bushnell, cottage, Nineteenth and West streets, one year's lease.
For C. F. Benz, lower flat, Fifteenth and Franklin streets, one year's lease.
For C. Vince, cottage, Thirty-fourth near Telegraph avenue, one year's lease.
For Thomas Prince, six room and bath apartment, 1374 Franklin street, one year's lease.
For P. J. Martins, store rooms, 471 Tenth street.
For Pierce Grocery Store Company, cottage, Chicago avenue, one year's lease.
For Miss A. Aldrich, flat on Jones street near Grove street, one year's lease.
For Dr. W. A. Sehorn, pair flats, 1409 Chestnut street, one year's lease.
For Minerva J. Sweeney, apartment flat, Eleventh and Madison streets, one year's lease.
For J. C. Stannard, upper flat, Brush street and Eighteenth, one year's lease.
For E. A. Whitaker to Marcus Jones' Clothing Company, two stores, Nos. 460-462 Eighth street, entire front being remodeled with double plate glass front, three years lease.
And the following monthly rentals:
For E. Lenevberger, four new cottages, on Market street near Twenty-eighth street.
For V. Fortin, cottage, Nineteenth near San Pablo avenue.
For Mrs. M. Winter, lower flat, Twenty-second and Brush streets.
For M. Tufts, cottage, Hudson street, near College avenue.
For Miss E. Montgomery, lower flat, Tenth street near Chestnut.
For M. Gobelstein, flat, on Grove street, near Eighth street.
For J. P. Dingwell, flat, on Twenty-fifth near Grove street.

BIG INDUSTRY FOR CITY OF ALAMEDA

An Eastern Steel and Iron Works to Invest $1,000,000 in a Plant on Waterfront

ALAMEDA, June 20.—Plans are being made through the real estate firm of Hammond & Hammond for the erection of a large iron works plant along the waterfront. The investment will involve in the vicinity of $1,000,000. The Eastern firm desiring the location is the New Jersey Steel and Iron Works corporation and the deal has been under way for some time. William Hammond Jr. states that in all probability the Eastern firm will commence the building of the plant within a few months. More than 600 men will be given employment.

Eastern Inquiries

The opportunity offered for investment in Alameda realty has brought inquiries from many of the Eastern firms, who desire to take advantage of these offers. Many of the residents of San Francisco, who had intended to make their home here temporarily, are now retaining permanent residence here. Rentals are normal and there is a steady demand for choice homes. Nearly all of the best residences have been taken up, yet there is a steady demand from outside residents for desirable homes and also for investment.

Largest Deal of the Week

One of the largest realty deals of the week is that through the firm of Lundy & Randlett for a beautiful home on Bay street, to be erected by George L. Walker. The house will cost in the vicinity of $15,000. The house is to be a two-story structure and the interior is to be elaborately fitted.

East End Improvements

The East end of the city is being improved in many ways and in that section of the city houses are going up and alterations are being made. This is considered to be one of the best sections for investment. Already there have been 25 new homes erected in this part of town and the realty men are receiving bids for property in this section.

Building Active

There is much activity in building on Laurel street and Oak street south of Clinton avenue. Bungalows and homes of the class "A" type have been erected and Laurel street is practically built up as a residence district. Property in this part of the city has taken a sudden bound upward and the holders of realty there have nearly doubled their money.

Eastern Firms Want Sites

The Chamber of Commerce is in receipt of a communication from a large Eastern manufacturer, which desires to locate here along the estuary. Secretary Ralph Russell, while not giving out the name of the firm owing to the unfinished nature of the business, volunteers the following statement: "I am not at liberty to disclose the

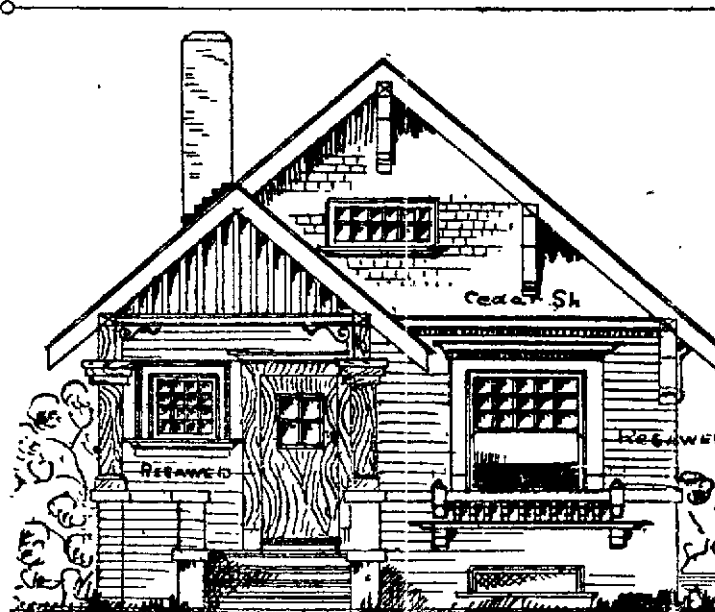

NEW DEPOTS OF

Passenger and Freight Distributing Structures Are Being Rushed to a Finish

The contractors employed by the Western Pacific Railroad Company to erect for it a passenger depot at Third and Washington streets and a freight distributing depot on Third street, from Harrison to Alameda street, are rushing the work in order to get both completed under the thirty day term of their contracts. Both structures are well advanced. The former is a fireproof concrete building. The latter is a wooden frame, built, however, in the most substantial manner. On both buildings a large body of skilled workmen are employed. It was the original purpose of the company to have passenger trains running into Oakland from Oroville and way places on the Fourth of July, but that seems scarcely possible to accomplish at the present time, unless the tracks are used for the transit of passenger trains before the depots are ready for use. The freight depot may be completed by that time, but the finishing of the passenger depot by that date seems at the present writing to be a very uncertain quantity. Passenger and freight traffic may not begin, therefore, until August. The company has, however, nearly 8000 men working on the line of the road on the same remaining to be closed in the northern part of the State and in Nevada between Oakland and Salt Lake City and the engineers have announced their expectation to have the line open for through traffic by September.

The development of the company's operations are being closely watched by real estate men and investors in realty, as the field in the vicinity of both of the new depots is regarded as one promising rich results when ripe to be exploited, for some of the finest in operation the whole character of neighboring property will become vastly more valuable for business purposes than the uses to which it is now being devoted.

HANDSOME NEW PIEDMONT HOME

REMOVAL OF A SEVENTH-ST. SHACK

The ramshackle one story wooden building fronting on the north side of Seventh street east of Broadway and adjoining the Hoffman Cafe on its west side and the former Dr. Rosenk brick building on its east side, has been removed. There are four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a sewing room and a sleeping porch. There are two large rooms finished in the attic and a laundry, furnace room, store room and servants room in the basement. The interior is elaborately finished with ceiling beams, seats, built-in bookcases, sideboard, china cabinets and cupboards. The fireplace are to be faced with specially made granite tile, and the kitchen is tiled. The building is heated with hot water and all the plumbing is of the most modern pattern. The interior is designed on the lines of the old English houses, with strong, sloping gables. The wood finish is stained the natural redwood color. The building completed will cost about $3,000.

block on the east side of the lot, have been cleared off to make way for a $35,000 brick block to be erected for use as a Turkish bath establishment. The owner is Louis Schaeffer, formerly chief of police and subsequently councilman, representing the Sixth ward. Schaeffer is the largest owner of realty in the block bounded by Broadway, Franklin, Seventh and Eighth streets, save the Galindo block, which covers an area 200x115 feet, as the result of fortunate investments. When the McCleverty estate was settled he bought the McCleverty estates with a frontage of fifty feet on Broadway and a depth of seventy-five feet and a frontage of fifty feet on Eighth street and a depth of one hundred feet which dovetailed into the Broadway lot as an L. Then came an opportunity to buy the Rosenk block covering one hundred feet of the Seventh street frontage which was awarded him in the probating of the estate of his late wife. He subsequently bought Miss Mary Kelley's fifty feet of the Seventh street frontage adjoining which gave him three frontages on the block, namely 150 feet on Seventh street, fifty feet on Broadway and fifty feet on Eighth street.

STRANGE SOUTH SIDE TRANSFERS

Rumored That the Santa Fe Is Securing Freight Depot Site on Alice Street

There is a good deal of street speculation going on regarding the rumor abroad that certain properties along the line of Alice street, between Second and Third streets, are changing ownership and associated with the rumor is that the Santa Fe company is standing behind the purchase. Several weeks ago, the whole one-half block on the east side of Alice street, having a frontage of two hundred feet on that thoroughfare extending from First to Second street, and having a frontage of one hundred and fifty feet on each of these thoroughfares, namely, property covered by Chinese tenements, stores and what was for a time a temporary Chinese theater, had been sold by the Stachler estate for approximately $50,000 to an electric light and power company which would immediately tear down the Chinese shell structures to begin at once the construction on the site of a big brick electric power generating house. But since the transfer nothing has been done toward making this promised improvement. The report that a mysterious agent is now at work securing property in the next block north of the old time Stachler block and fronting on Alice, with whom the name of the Santa Fe is being associated, aroused the suspicion that the mysterious electric light and power company is a fiction and was merely conjured up as a blind to cloak temporarily the Santa Fe Railroad Company and its purposes and plans and facilitate the purchase by another of its agents of the block between Second and Third streets on the same side of Alice street.

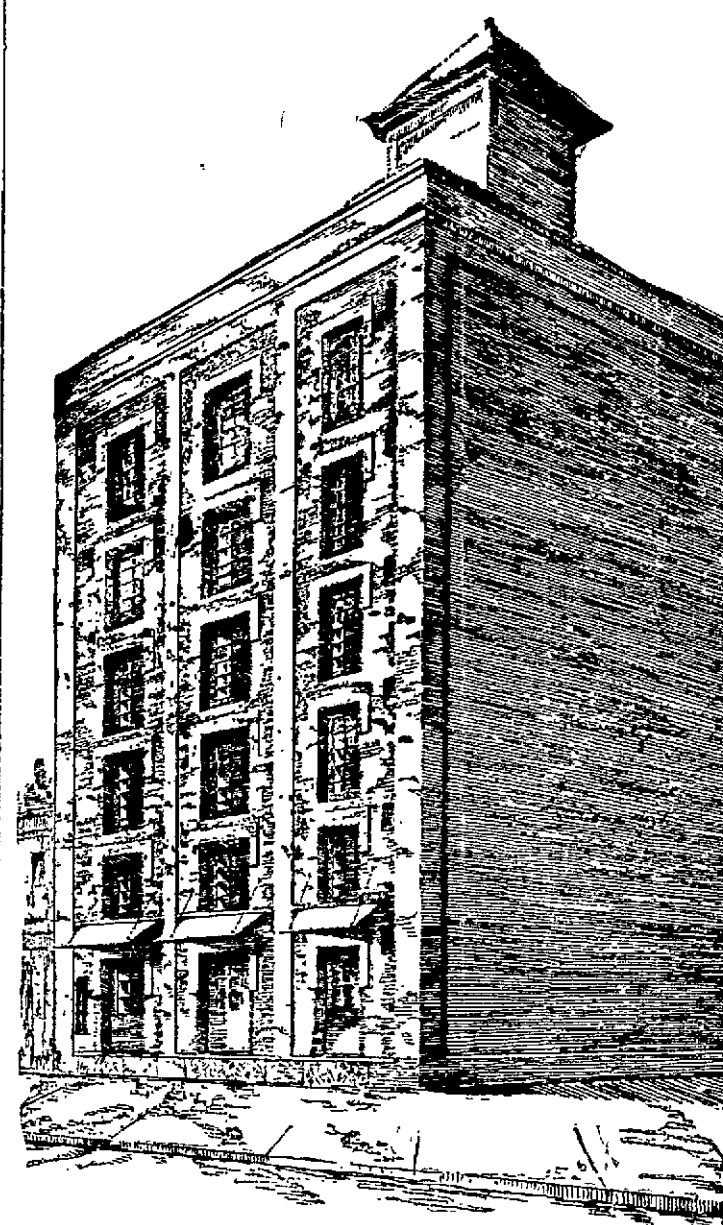

Gossip About Santa Fe Plans

The street gossip associated with these transactions is that the Santa Fe is acquiring the property for the establishment thereof of a distributing freight depot corresponding with that which the Western Pacific Railroad Company is now building on the north side of Third street, between Alice and Harrison streets, so as to place itself equally in touch with the central business district of the city.

Santa Fe Lacks Right of Way

The one thing that somewhat disturbs this kind of street gossip is that the Santa Fe Railroad Company has no franchise that will enable it to reach the property in question, not has it applied for any. There is an understanding that when the belt road to be constructed from Fruitvale along the waterfront south of First street to Wood street and thence north to Twelfth street, shall be used jointly by all railroads for the accommodation of the industries established on the southern and western sides of the city; but to get from the belt road to the property on Alice street between First and Second, the Santa Fe would have to build a spur across the First street tracks of the Southern Pacific company and across the tracks leading to the Harrison street railroad bridge. If the Santa Fe Railroad Company is, therefore, the corporation which is negotiating these land purchases, with the intent of acquiring the property as a site for a freight distributing depot it is much more likely, therefore, that it will be an applicant for a franchise.

Lyon Storage Company's New Warehouse Now Being Built On Twenty-ninth Street to Cost $20,000.

chase along Second street to reach it, although that street terminates at Market street and such a franchise to be of any utility would involve the purchase of a right-of-way through private property from Wood street to Market.

May Be an S. P. Move

A more reasonable theory than the one formed on the street regarding the corporation behind these transfers on Alice street is that it is the Southern Pacific Company and not the Santa Fe, as the Southern Pacific tracks run along the south end of it now and it would be a comparatively trifling matter to run spurs into it. Besides, a distributing freight depot at the foot of Alice street would remove the handicap of the long haul to the business center under which the location of the freight depot at the foot of Kirkham street places the Southern Pacific in competition with the short haul from the distributing freight depot of the Western Pacific Company now under construction. However, if the agent of any railroad corporation is busy picking up property in the locality described or in any other part of the southeast corner of the Sixth ward, there will soon be a showing of hands.

BIG WAREHOUSE ON 29TH ST.

It Will Have a Capacity for the Storage of Five Hundred Wagon Loads

Before the financial panic of October, 1907, the Lyon Storage and Moving Company planned the erection of a six-story reinforced concrete warehouse on a lot 60x100 on Twenty-ninth street, near Grove. Plans were prepared for it and an application for a permit was filed at the time with the Board of Public Works. Then came the bankers' financial panic and the general locking up of money, and, with many other important improvements, the plans for the erection of this storage warehouse had to be temporarily pigeon-holed. Now the money market has grown easy and the project has been financially revived by the R. M. Lyons Company, with whom a contract has been closed for its immediate construction. Materials for the building are now being delivered on the premises. At present, however, only two of the six stories will be built, provision being made for the addition later of the upper floors designed in the plans. The building will be absolutely fireproof, as it will not contain a single stick of timber in its walls or floors. Water mains will, moreover, be run through the entire building, all of which is expected to result in reducing the rate of insurance to a minimum. The warehouse will contain one large room for storage exclusively of pianos; also large vaults for the storage of trunks and valuables. The rest of the building will be subdivided into separately locked rooms. It will have a total storage capacity for 500 wagon-loads. It will cost approximately $20,000 and will be ready for occupation in three months.

mus pressure to which they will be subjected. The first shipment of the salt water mains started from the East on Wednesday, and probably reach here on or before July 15.

"The new gas mains are being laid as follows: Twenty-inch cast iron pipe on Grove street, from the new gasholder to Fourth street, thence along Fourth street to Harrison street, along Harrison to Nineteenth, to Webster, to Twenty-sixth street, to Market street and to San Pablo avenue. Sixteen-inch cast iron pipe will branch off the main line at Twelfth and Harrison, being laid thence along Twelfth street to First avenue, thence to East Fifteenth street and along the latter thoroughfare to Twenty-third avenue.

ROBERT HARRISON.

One of the biggest favorites the Liberty stock company has contained, Robert Harrison, makes his re-appearance with the company next Monday evening in "The Girl of the Golden West" after a forced vacation of three months due to ill health. This will be welcome news to Mr. Harrison's many personal friends, as well as playgoers, in general, for in the three years in which he has been associated with the stock company he has become exceedingly popular.

In the initial Oakland presentation of Belasco's greatest play, Harrison will assume the role of Jack Rance, the gambling sheriff, the part originated in New York by Frank Keenan. It is a character for which he is superbly fitted by nature, as he is typical of the Californian of early days, tall and angular, and his presence is sure to add strength to the cast of what promises to be the finest stock production ever offered in this city. David Belasco's wizardry as a playwright finds no more vivid reflection than in "The Girl of the Golden West." Nothing he has ever done either as a writer or producer, possesses more strength of appeal to American playgoers than this drama of pioneer life in California. Just how deep an impression it made upon the people of New York may be judged from the fact that it remained at the Belasco Theater two consecutive years. How much more magnetic, then, must it be to the folk of the region in which its scenes are laid.

Besides Mr. Harrison's return, great interest is being taken in the first Oakland appearance of Florence Oakley and Sydney Ayres, the new leading people of the company, as well as many other players of note. Altogether, next Monday night will be an important one at the Liberty Playhouse.

TAFT AND KAISER BID TO JUBILEE

Golden Plates Will Bear Invitations to 50th Anniversary of Schuetzen Verein

President Taft and Emperor William have been invited to attend the golden jubilee festival of the San Francisco Schuetzen Verein, to be held in Shellmound Park from August 29 to September 5.

The invitations are engraved on gold-plated plates, one for the president and one for the emperor. Each plate is five and one-half inches in length, three and one-half inches wide, 14-karat fine, and contains eighty penny-weight California gold, handsomely engraved and resting in a fine jewel case. The fact that President Taft and Emperor William have been elected honorary members of the Schuetzen Verein is mentioned on the invitation card.

The invitation to President Taft has been sent to Congressman Julius Kahn, who will present it to the President on behalf of the Verein. The invitation to Emperor William has been transmitted through Consul Franz Bopp, who represents the emperor at the port of San Francisco, and he will send it to the emperor.

Since President Taft will be on the Pacific Coast at about the time of the festival, it is probable he will be in San Francisco during the festival. Emperor William will be represented either by Consul Bopp or some other German diplomat.

The golden jubilee marks the fiftieth anniversary of one of the most prominent German societies, organized in what was then a new settlement, by the most prominent Germans of the early days, men who have been closely identified with the upbuilding and the development of San Francisco and California. The celebration, besides an extensive rifle and pistol tournament, will include a volleyball in the park for eight days. All the German societies of San Francisco and many towns and cities in California will participate.

Rifle, pistol and revolver clubs from all sections of the country will be represented and will compete for rich prizes. The Verein has made a generous appropriation for the festival, and any surplus will be devoted to furthering causes cherished by every German on the Pacific Coast.

SCHOOL GROUNDS TO OPEN FOR CHILDREN

On Monday at 10 o'clock the spacious grounds of the Prescott and Thompson grammar schools will be thrown open for the summer months to school children all over the city by the Park and Playgrounds Commission.

The purpose of the new project, which is in keeping with a number of plans under consideration by the commission, is to prevent as far as possible the temptation for youngsters, released from the discipline of the schoolroom, to run free in the streets, by providing them a more attractive recreation ground.

WILL GIVE BAZAAR TO MEET CHURCH DEBT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—To meet the debt incurred through the erection of a beautiful new church, the priests and parishioners of St. Paul's parish are preparing for a bazaar which will be held in the new edifice next September. Work on the new church began eight years ago. The fair will embrace some twelve booths, the largest of which will be conducted by the Immaculate Conception Sodality and the Holy Angels Sodality. The other booths will be conducted by prominent individuals of St. Paul's parish, prominent among whom are: Mrs. Joseph Mesgher, Mrs. Marron, Mrs. Nolan, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Buckley, Mrs. Vallegre, Mrs. Corby, Mrs. Oviedo, Mrs. Kicker, Mrs. O'Connor and Mrs. Dunn.
